SUBMARINE SINKS BRITISH CRUISER CARRYING 375 MEN

Austrians Announce Vessel Was Destroyed by One of Their Undersea Craft in Adriatic—Two British Fishing Boats Attacked and Sunk by Zeppelins in the North Sea.

INNSBRUCK, June 11 (by Courier to the Swiss Frontier and via Geneva and Paris).—Announcement has been made here by the Austrians that one of their submarines yesterday sunk a British cruiser of the Liverpool type at a point 30 miles off St. Jean Medua in the Adriatic.

This type of vessel has a displacement of 4800 tons, is 430 feet long and carries a complement of 375 men.

MAASLUIS, HOLLAND, June 11.—The British fishing smacks Welfare and Laurestima were attacked and sunk by Zeppelins in the North Sea. The crews which took to their boats were picked up by a Dutch smack and brought here.

VIRTUALLY ALL HAD TIP ON QUESTIONS, MIDSHIPMAN SAYS

Always Customary to Get Information Before Examination, Witness Declares.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 11.—Midshipman George D. Price, a member of the new first year class at the Naval Academy, today told the court of inquiry which is investigating irregularities in examinations that he knew of but one man out of the first and second classes who did not have advance information concerning the last annual examinations in the department of modern languages. This was in the form of copies of sentences and matters that had been emphasized in class.

He had no knowledge that any of the so-called "dope" that was being generally circulated had been copied from questions in an official examination paper. The combined membership of the first and second classes, Price said, was about 25.

A midshipman would be regarded as a fool by his classmates if he reported to the authorities that he had received advance information, Price said.

Customary to Get "Dope." It was always custom to get a little "dope" just before an examination, he added. Some of this was in the nature of suggestions given out in classroom by instructors to study certain things that were important. Not all instructors gave out such suggestions. Therefore, he said, in reply to another question, a midshipman in a section where such suggestions were not given was at a disadvantage as compared with one in a section pursuing the same course of study who received suggestions.

Counsel for the original seven midshipmen recommended for dismissal, indicated by questions put to the witness that the system permitting of the giving out of helpful hints by an instructor in one section not given in another section pursuing the same course of study, works an unfairness.

The kind of "dope" that Price received, he testified, did not come from his instructor, but he understood it was disseminated in Prof. Cusack's section.

"Not Regarded as Improper." Midshipman Robert J. Walker of the present first class, testified along similar lines. He said the dissemination of helpful information was general among members of the first and second classes prior to the examination. It was not regarded as having come from improper sources.

Admiral Fullam, superintendent of the academy, was recalled and furnished the court with a list of 35 midshipmen who had, to his knowledge, possessed advance information relative to examinations.

SOCIALIST NEWSPAPER PLANT DESTROYED BY AN EXPLOSION

BUTTE, Mont., June 11.—The plant of the Butte Socialist, a weekly newspaper, was wrecked by an explosion, presumably by dynamite, early this morning. The building took fire and burned fiercely.

While the nature of the explosion has not been determined, a patrolman declared that he smelled giant powder smoke. The engine of the building was wrecked and the front was hurled into the street. A gallery at the rear was blown loose and fell on machinery below.

STRYCHNINE IN THE STOMACH OF INDIANA CORONER

Died Suddenly When Federal Inquiry Began Into Mailing of Poison to Many Persons.

NINE SUSPICIOUS DEATHS

Investigation Continued—Announcement of Inquest Verdict to Be Public Occasion.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
SPENCER, Ind., June 11.—Strychnine, the poison used in the sample bottles of quinine which 22 residents of Owen County are known to have received, and which is believed to have caused the death of nine persons here, was found in the stomach of former coroner F. E. Drescher by Dr. R. P. Noble, a chemist of Indianapolis, according to his official report which reached Acting Coroner McClure today.

Drescher died suddenly June 2, after a fatal attack of strychnine poisoning. The official report was to be made public at 2 o'clock. A special reader, was engaged and announcement of the report and the Acting Coroner's verdict was to be a public occasion. The people of the county have been anxiously awaiting the report.

When the report was received at 10 o'clock, the Acting Coroner, Deputy Prosecutor Duncan and two physicians went into executive session. Acting Coroner McClure told a Post-Dispatch reporter the report was in such complicated terms it would require several hours to gain a complete understanding of it.

He said it announced that strychnine had been found in the stomach, but under circumstances which indicated that it had probably been introduced into the body by hypodermic injection. No blood was taken from the body for test as to hypodermic injection.

Drescher died about 7 p. m. An autopsy was made by Dr. C. F. Gray about midnight and the stomach was removed. When, later, it was thought advisable to have a blood test made, it was found that an undertaker, a friend of Drescher, had arrived at 130 a. m. from Indianapolis on a freight train and embalmed the body.

"There is nothing in the report which interferes with our preconceived ideas of the case," said McClure. "It is a mighty hard report to understand, and in view of the intense public interest in the case, I must take great pains in preparing a verdict before giving it filed and read."

"I cannot quite get at the bottom of the report," said Prosecutor Duncan. "There was poison in the stomach, but the report is filled with theories as to how it reached there and whether or not the amount might have caused death."

"Of course, so far as the prosecutor's office is concerned, the verdict will simply mean that we may be able to narrow our search for the poison responsible for this attempt at wholesale murder. We are going to get the men, and the verdict in the Drescher case has but little bearing upon the serious situation."

GRATIOT SCHOOL BUILDING IS DAMAGED BY LIGHTNING

Two Rooms in Newer Part of Building Struck—Part of Concrete Roof Destroyed.

The Gratiot School, Manchester and Billion avenues, was struck by lightning in last night's storm and two rooms were damaged. The rooms were in the newer part of the building, and a concrete roof caved in upon one of them, while the room below was damaged by water which leaked through. So far as is known, the building did not take fire.

The children were all excused today, and an inspector from the building department of the Board of Education was summoned.

Classes probably will be resumed Monday in the eight undamaged rooms. The Board of Education announced the damage was about $1000.

In this party was Henry Wuestenfeld, who, with four friends, started from East Alton for Woodriver in an automobile. They had gone about half the distance when a group of the stampeding British and French horses crossed their path. One of the horses kicked Wuestenfeld as he sat in the automobile. Three of his ribs were broken. Other members of his party were not injured.

A Stockyard expert recently said the average price paid by the British and French for horses in the St. Louis market since the war began was $100 a head. Figuring on this basis, $500,000 worth of army mounts broke out of the stockade.

All of the horses were branded when purchased at the National Stockyards and can be identified by these markings.

5000 HORSES GET OUT OF CORRAL, OVERRUN 3 TOWNS

Stampeded by Storm, Animals Dash Through Woodriver, East Alton and Benbow City.

HEAVY DAMAGE CAUSED

Gardens, Fences and Trees Destroyed, Trains Delayed and Autoist Injured.

Nearly 5000 war horses, recently purchased by the British and French Governments, escaped from a stockade of stout timbers and barbed wire entanglements at East Alton this morning when frightened by an electrical storm, delayed two passenger trains for more than an hour, injured an automobilist and overran the towns of East Alton, Benbow City and Woodriver, frightening the inhabitants and causing much damage.

The stampeding horses, sufficient in number to mount four cavalry regiments, overran American Bottoms farms and truck patches, trampled flower gardens and damaged shade trees in the three towns.

Today there was the unusual scene of an old-time Wild West roundup, almost at the gates of St. Louis.

British and French army officers and "cowboys" from the National Stockyards in East St. Louis, all carrying pistols and some wearing fuzzy, furry chaps, like the rough-riding actors in the movies, ranged over a stretch of country several miles in extent, trying to head off stampeding groups of the horses and drive them back to the concentration camp.

The frightened animals ran back and forth through the streets of the three towns. At intervals there would be cries of "Here they come," and then the villagers would rush to cover. Women were afraid to venture on the streets and children were kept home from school.

100 Feet of Fence Broken Down.
The horses escaped about midnight when lightning was flashing and thunder was bringing up its heavy artillery. They broke down more than 100 feet of stout board fence and burst through an outer corral of barbed wire.

When the Chicago & Alton passenger train, which left St. Louis at midnight, reached Wood River, eight miles south of Alton, the headlights showed hundreds of horses on the right of way. Before the engineer could stop he ran into the rear guard of the stampeding army horses, killing eight of them.

Because of the compact mass of horses on the track the train was delayed about an hour. After trying in vain to drive the horses from the right of way, members of the train crew opened fire on them with revolvers, killing two. The sound of the shooting seemed to frighten the others and they retreated.

Another Train Delayed.
The Chicago & Eastern Illinois passenger train, due in St. Louis at 2 a. m., was delayed an hour and a half by the horses.

Near Edwardsville five of the horses died from eating green corn. Up to noon 32 were reported to be dead from eating corn or from being struck by trains.

All through the night, raiding parties of the equine army made frequent raids on East Alton, Benbow City and Wood River.

They swept through the streets in large bodies, knocking down young shade trees, destroying fences and trampling gardens.

James Chessen of East Alton, a noted horseman, rounded up 50 of the stampeding cavalry mounts in his barnyard early today and is holding them for ransom. He said they showed their foraging appetite by eating leaves from his shade trees and that they also caused other damage to his property. Chessen said he would hold the horses until reimbursed for his losses.

About 100 persons who had been on a steamboat excursion to Alton were terrified by the horses while going from the landing at East Alton to their homes.

In this party was Henry Wuestenfeld, who, with four friends, started from East Alton for Woodriver in an automobile. They had gone about half the distance when a group of the stampeding British and French horses crossed their path. One of the horses kicked Wuestenfeld as he sat in the automobile. Three of his ribs were broken. Other members of his party were not injured.

A Stockyard expert recently said the average price paid by the British and French for horses in the St. Louis market since the war began was $100 a head. Figuring on this basis, $500,000 worth of army mounts broke out of the stockade.

STATE TO INQUIRE INTO RATES OF UNION ELECTRIC

Public Service Commission Orders Accountants to Examine Property and Books.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 11.—The Public Service Commission today ordered its expert accountants and engineers to make an examination of the property and plant of the Union Electric Light and Power Co. as a basis for regulating its rates.

The order was made in connection with proceedings instituted because of the complaint of the Engineers' Inflation Club of St. Louis, in which it was charged that many of the rates were unreasonably high, while others are unreasonably low, and that there is a difference of 100 per cent between its highest rate and its lowest rates.

The complaint also charges the Union Electric company is paying the Mississippi River Power Co. an unnecessarily high rate for current, as originally brought out by the Post-Dispatch.

The Mississippi River Power Co. was organized and is owned by the North American Co. which owns the Union Electric. The former acts as an intermediary or middleman, buying power from the Keokuk dam company and selling it to the Union Electric.

The order of the commission also directs the Union Electric Co. to file statements taken from its records showing the following facts: Balance sheet of Dec. 31, 1914; trial balance of general ledger before closing; an analysis of investment in equipment and plant in service; analysis of other investments showing clearly land, building and equipment taken from its records showing for each year and what disposition has been made of them; comparative statement of profit and loss account for three years ending Dec. 31, 1914; divide 1914 business into classes, showing service rendered to four classes of consumers—commercial, municipal, power and flat rate.

Body Found Under Overturned Car Near Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, June 11.—The mangled body of Douglas H. Thomas Jr., son of Douglas H. Thomas, president of the Merchants-Mechanics National Bank of Baltimore, was found under his overturned automobile near Roland Park today. Thomas dined with several friends in this city last night and started for his country home at A. The accident happened on a steep hill where a similar fatal accident occurred a few weeks ago.

Thomas was 44 years old and a widower with four children. He had achieved high standing as an architect and was prominent in the club and society life of Baltimore.

SEVERAL OF EITEL CREW SAID TO HAVE LEFT THE COUNTRY

Customs Collector at Norfolk Says Lieut. Brauer and "Certain Others" Are Missing.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Lieut. Brauer and "certain of the crew" of the German commerce raider, Prinze Eitel Friedrich, who left the ship before she was formally interned, and have not returned at the Norfolk Navy Yard, are believed to have left the country. Customs Collector Hamilton at Norfolk made this report today to the Treasury Department.

Special agents of the Department of Justice now are conducting an investigation at the instance of the State Department, to which Collector Hamilton's report was referred. It appears that Brauer and the men were not on parole, because the ship had not been interned, but Collector Hamilton understood he had the word of Capt. Thierich, one that none of his officers or crew would leave the vicinity of Newport News while the status of the cruiser was in suspense.

"It has come to my attention," Collector Hamilton reported today, "that one Lieut. Brauer, who was either the first officer or the executive officer of the Prinze Eitel Friedrich when she arrived at Newport News, Va., March 10, 1915, has left the ship. There is also reason to believe that Lieut. Brauer may have left the United States and that certain other members of the crew of the Prinze Eitel Friedrich, who were aboard the ship when she arrived March 10, are not now aboard and may possibly have also left the United States with Lieut. Brauer."

The commander of the Prinze Eitel Friedrich admits that Lieut. Brauer is not now aboard. He states that Lieut. Brauer left the Prinze Eitel soon after her arrival at Newport News, as did also members of the crew who may not now be aboard, and asserts that since

GERARD PRESENTS NOTE; FAVORABLE REPLY EXPECTED

Acting Secretary Lansing Says "Not One Word" Was Changed After It Was Shown to Bryan.

RESPONSE FROM GERMANY LIKELY WITHIN 10 DAYS

Cabinet Meets With Lansing Present by Invitation—Washington, After Reading President's Letter, Puzzled at Bryan's Resignation.

The Text of the Note Will Be Found on Page 2

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
BERLIN, June 11.—Ambassador Gerard presented the American note at the German Foreign Office at 1:10 p. m. today.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—With the publication today of the latest American note to Germany concerning the sinking of the Lusitania, officials of the United States Government and diplomats generally discussed among themselves the probable character of the German Government's answer.

While there was no definite information, the feeling in German quarters was that a favorable response was likely, as the note seemed to open the door to a solution compatible with the interests of both Germany and the United States.

The note, it was said, was purposely phrased so that it would give Germany an opportunity to meet the wishes of the United States with dignity and in conformity with German public opinion.

It became known today that although the note was shown to former Secretary Bryan by direction of President Wilson, just before it was dispatched, it was not altered after Mr. Bryan had seen it. Acting Secretary Lansing, who showed Mr. Bryan the note, said today that "not a word or letter" had been changed.

Mr. Lansing had not signed the note as Secretary ad interim when he took it to Mr. Bryan and at that time by the terms of Mr. Bryan's resignation, the latter was still Secretary of State. Immediately after the conference, Mr. Lansing signed the note and Mr. Bryan's resignation became effective.

The cabinet met today with Acting Secretary Lansing, who attended by invitation of the President, sitting in place of former Secretary Bryan. The situation with Germany was discussed, as well as that with Mexico. It was agreed nothing more could be done in the case of Germany pending a reply to the latest American note delivered today by Ambassador Gerard to the Berlin Foreign Office.

Answer May Be Delayed.
While the President expects a prompt answer, it is realized that it may be two weeks in coming. It is thought that it may be delayed until Meyer Gerard, special envoy from Ambassador Bernstorff, arrives and delivers his message concerning the attitude of the American public.

In the meantime Germany will be informed of the facts gathered by the American Government in connection with the dropping of bombs from an aeroplane on the American steamer Cushing.

Officials refused to make any comment on Mr. Bryan's statement of last night and his announced intention of issuing others. It was declared, however, that the President would make no replies. There were outward indications, however, that administration officials generally are not pleased.

With the publication today of the note officials of the United States Government and diplomats generally discussed among themselves the probable character of the German Government's answer.

Favorable Response Expected.

While there was no definite information, the feeling in German quarters was that a favorable response was likely, as the note seemed to open the door to a solution compatible with the interests of both Germany and the United States.

The note, it was said, was purposely phrased so that it would give Germany an opportunity to meet the wishes of the United States with dignity and in conformity with German public opinion. Many officials wondered why Secretary Bryan declined to sign the note which they regarded as friendly in tone, and carrying many expressions of good will.

Berlin Newspapers Head Note as "Solemn Warning," "Grave Appeal"

BERLIN, June 11.—The American note in wording but were similar in tone. Among the captions were: "America Stands Firm," "A Very Solemn Warning," "Grave American Warning to Germany," "The Grave Appeal."

The headlines of the newspapers varied in wording but were similar in tone. Among the captions were: "America Stands Firm," "A Very Solemn Warning," "Grave American Warning to Germany," "The Grave Appeal."

worked until 3 o'clock this morning decoding the note as fast as it was received from Washington.

The first sections of the note arrived in Berlin late yesterday afternoon and the other sections came in early in the evening.

In the afternoon yesterday James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador, called on Herr von Jagow and was closeted with him for over half an hour.

There was an atmosphere of tense expectation in press and governmental circles regarding the contents of the note concerning which such contradictory statements had been telegraphed from London.

None of the morning newspapers refers in any way to the note or to the fact that it has been received and there is no comment on the general situation.

The resignation of William J. Bryan as Secretary of State has been announced by the usual press information.

The feeling which had existed in certain quarters that the negotiations could not pass beyond the state of exchanging notes and expressing views began to fade rapidly when it was seen that the situation was serious enough to lead to the retirement of the head of the Cabinet.

Local Ambassador Condemns.
The one question heard in all quarters—naval, military, diplomatic and civil—was: What will the United States do, and what is the significance of Bryan's retirement? That the resignation of the Secretary of State had not been without effect was shown by a conciliatory article captioned "America," given most prominent display in double-column space by the usual press information.

This article, which appears in the position reserved for communications of the utmost importance, says: "President Wilson allowed his first adviser, who had made known his pacifist theories, to depart in this critical hour. No compromise between their attitudes was possible, therefore, attempts to reach a peaceful solution, nevertheless, should not be abandoned. This is not the counsel of faint-heartedness, but of an earnest will not to make worse out of a political return. Considerations of humanity may naturally be taken into consideration so far as the military situation and the policy of the empire will permit."

No Sacrifice Necessary.
"It easily may be believed that honorable and unprejudiced negotiations between the parties concerned may lead to an understanding which neither side should sacrifice anything; neither needs to do so. It is necessary to wait and see whether President Wilson's note leaves the door open for advantageous negotiations. We believe a basis does exist for such negotiations, and this basis can be built upon with the good will of the parties concerned. Our military interests and our judicial standpoint to which we must and shall adhere do not stand in the way of an honest interchange of views which contains no compromise of principle."

It is not known definitely whether this article was inspired, but there is good reason to believe it largely represents the attitude of at least some of those persons responsible for the relations between Germany and the United States. The outcome of the German-American negotiations depends on the extent to which this attitude is shared in other quarters of co-ordinate and higher scope.

IVON NUCKE OF EMDEN SAYS DARDANELLES CAN'T BE TAKEN

He Predicts Submarine Will Cut Off Water Supply of Allied Troops in Gallipoli.

VIENNA, June 11.—An interview with Capt. von Nucke, formerly of the German cruiser Emden, in which he says the forcing of the Dardanelles and the taking of Constantinople are impossible, is published by the newspapers here. He declares submarines are likely to cut off the water supply of the allied troops on the Gallipoli Peninsula, which would compel them to retreat. He would be unable to return to his transports.

Capt. von Nucke says the guns of the British warships have been damaged by hard usage and that the super-dreadnought Queen Elizabeth soon will be compelled to withdraw on this account. He asserts the Turkish fleet is plentiful and formidable and is magnificent fighting.

Capt. von Nucke, presumably promoted from the rank of Lieutenant, which he held on the Emden, apparently was ordered to Vienna on his way to Berlin, after having piloted the landing party, which was under his command when the Emden was sunk, from Cece Island to safety at Damascus, whence it was not difficult to reach Constantinople. His own story of his adventures on this perilous voyage and march was printed in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

ITALY SAID TO HAVE AGREEMENT ON EXTENT OF HER CAMPAIGN

Will Attempt to Force Dual Empire to Bring Up 1,000,000 Men, It Is Reported.

LUGANO, Switzerland, via Paris, June 11.—Information has been received here from Italian sources that Italy has made an agreement with her allies as to the extent of her offensive campaign. According to this information, which lacks confirmation, the Italian Government has undertaken to conduct operations of a character which will compel Austria and Germany to bring up an army of 1,000,000 men.

It is expected the development of the Italian campaign beginning with the heavy fighting along the Isonzo River, will compel Italy's opponents to reinforce their armies largely.

The immediate Italian objectives are Trent, Trieste and Villach, the provincial capital of Carinthia.

Full Text of the President's Rejoinder to German Reply to Note on the Lusitania

WASHINGTON, June 11.

THE text of the American rejoinder to the German Government's reply to the note following the sinking of the Lusitania, is as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF STATE AD INTERIM TO THE AMERICAN AMBASSADOR TO BERLIN:

Department of State, Washington, June 9, 1915.

American Ambassador, Berlin:

You are instructed to deliver textually the following note to the Minister of Foreign Affairs:

In compliance with your excellency's request, I did not fail to transmit to my Government immediately upon receipt your note of May 28 in reply to my note of May 15, and your supplementary note of June 1, setting forth the conclusions so far as reached by the Imperial German Government concerning the attacks on the American steamers Cushing and Guilford. I am now instructed by my Government to communicate the following in reply:

The Government of the United States notes with gratification the full recognition by the Imperial German Government, in discussing the cases of the Cushing and the Guilford, of the principle of freedom of all parts of the open sea to neutral ships and the frank willingness of the Imperial German Government to acknowledge and meet its liability where the fact of attack upon neutral ships "which have not been guilty of any hostile act, by German aircraft or vessels of war is satisfactorily established; and the Government of the United States will in due course lay before the Imperial German Government as it requests, full information concerning the attack on the steamer Cushing.

Case of the Sinking of the Falaba.

With regard to the sinking of the steamer Falaba, by which an American citizen lost his life, the Government of the United States is surprised to find the Imperial German Government contending that an effort on the part of a merchantman to escape capture and secure assistance alters the obligation of the officer seeking to make the capture in respect of the safety of the lives of those on board the merchantman, although the vessel has ceased her attempt to escape when torpedoed.

These are not new circumstances. They have been in the minds of statesmen and of international jurists throughout the development of naval warfare, and the government of the United States does not understand that they have ever been held to alter the principles of humanity upon which it has insisted. Nothing but actual forcible resistance or continued efforts to escape by flight when ordered to stop for the purpose of visit on the part of the merchantman has ever been held to forfeit the lives of her passengers or crew. The government of the United States, however, does not understand that the Imperial German government is seeking in this case to relieve itself of liability, but only intends to set forth the circumstances which led the commander of the submarine to allow himself to be hurried into the course which he took.

Your excellency's note, in discussing the loss of American lives resulting from the sinking of the steamship Lusitania, adverts at some length to certain information which the Imperial German government has received with regard to the character and outfit of that vessel, and your excellency expresses the fear that this information may not have been brought to the attention of the government of the United States.

It is stated in the note that the Lusitania was undoubtedly equipped with masked guns, supplied with trained gunners and special ammunition, transporting troops from Canada, carrying a cargo not permitted under the laws of the United States to a vessel also carrying passengers, and serving, in virtual effect, as an auxiliary to the naval forces of Great Britain.

Lusitania Not Armed for Offense.

Fortunately these are matters concerning which the Government of the United States is in a position to give the Imperial German Government official information. Of the facts alleged in your excellency's note, if true, the Government of the United States would have been bound to take official cognizance in performing its recognized duty as a neutral power and in enforcing its national laws. It was its duty to see to it that the Lusitania was not armed for offensive action, that she was not serving as a transport, and that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States, and that in fact she was a naval vessel of Great Britain she should not receive clearances as a merchantman and it performed that duty and enforced its statutes with scrupulous vigilance through its regularly constituted officials. It is able, therefore, to assure the Imperial German Government that it has been misinformed.

If the Imperial German Government should deem itself to be in possession of convincing evidence that the officials of the Government of the United States did not perform these duties with thoroughness the Government of the United States sincerely hopes that it will submit that evidence for consideration.

Whatever may be the contentions of the Imperial German Government regarding the carriage of contraband of war on board the Lusitania or regarding the explosion of that material by the torpedo, it need only be said that in the view of this Government these contentions are irrelevant to the question of the legality of the methods used by the German naval authorities in sinking the vessel.

Principles of Humanity Are Involved.

But the sinking of passenger ships involves principles of humanity which throw into the background any special circumstances of detail that may be thought to affect the cases, principles which lift it, as the Imperial German Government will no doubt be quick to recognize and acknowledge, out of the class of ordinary subjects of diplomatic discussion or of international controversy.

Whatever be the other facts regarding the Lusitania, the principal fact is that a great steamer, primarily and chiefly a conveyance for passengers and carrying more than a thousand souls, who had no part

What U. S. Demanded in First Note and Insists Upon in the Second

FOLLOWING is the text of that part of the American note containing this Government's demands for alteration in German submarine war methods against neutral commerce and non-restricting merchant ships, which are firmly reiterated in today's rejoinder to the Berlin reply:

"IT (the United States Government) takes it for granted that, at least within the practical possibilities of every such case, the commanders even of submarines were expected to do nothing that would involve the lives of noncombatants or the safety of neutral ships, even at the cost of failing of their object of capture or destruction. It confidently expects therefore that the Imperial German Government will disavow the acts of which the Government of the United States complains, that they will make reparation so far as reparation is possible for injuries which are without measure, and that they will take immediate steps to prevent the recurrence of anything so obviously subversive of the principles of warfare for which the Imperial German Government have in the past so wisely and so firmly contended."

or let in the conduct of the war, was torpedoed and sunk without so much as a challenge or warning, and that men, women and children were sent to their death in circumstances unparalleled in modern warfare. The fact that more than 100 American citizens were among those who perished made it the duty of the Government of the United States to speak of these things and once more, with solemn emphasis, to call the attention of the Imperial German Government to the grave responsibility which the Government of the United States conceives that it has incurred in this tragic occurrence, and to the indisputable principle upon which that responsibility rests.

The Government of the United States is contending for something much greater than mere rights of property or privileges of commerce. It is contending for nothing less high and sacred than the rights of humanity, which every Government honors itself in respecting and which no Government is justified in resigning on behalf of those under its care and authority. Only her actual resistance to capture or refusal to stop when ordered to do so for the purpose of visit could have afforded the commander of the submarine any justification for so much as putting the lives of those on board the ship in jeopardy.

This principle the Government of the United States understands the explicit instructions issued on Aug. 3, 1914, by the Imperial German Admiralty to its commanders at sea to have recognized and embodied, as do the naval codes of all other nations, and upon it every traveler and seaman had a right to depend. It is upon this principle of humanity, as well as upon the law founded upon this principle, that the United States must stand.

Good Offices Open to Belligerents.

The Government of the United States is happy to observe that Your Excellency's note closes with the intimation that the Imperial German Government is willing, now as before, to accept the good offices of the United States in an attempt to come to an understanding with the Government of Great Britain by which the character and conditions of the war upon the sea may be changed. The Government of the United States would consider it a privilege thus to serve its friends and the world. It stands ready at any time to convey to either Government an intimation or suggestion the other may be willing to have it convey, and cordially invites the Imperial German Government to make use of its services in this way at its convenience. The whole world is concerned in anything that may bring about even a partial accommodation of interests or in any way mitigate the terrors of the present distressing conflict.

In the meantime, whatever arrangement might happily be made between the parties to the war, and whatever may be in the opinion of the Imperial German Government have been the provocation or the circumstantial justification for the past acts of its commanders at sea, the Government of the United States confidently looks to see the justice and humanity of the Government of Germany vindicated in all cases where Americans have been wronged or their rights as neutrals invaded.

Renews Representations of Note of May 15.

The Government of the United States therefore very earnestly and very solemnly renews the representations of its note transmitted to the Imperial German Government on the 15th of May, and relies in these representations upon the principles of humanity, the universally recognized understandings of international law, and the ancient friendship of the German nation.

The Government of the United States cannot admit that the proclamation of a war zone from which neutral ships have been warned to keep away may be made to operate as in any degree an abandonment of the rights either of American shipmasters or of American citizens bound on lawful errands as passengers on merchant ships of belligerent nationality. It does not understand the Imperial German Government to question those rights.

It understands it, also, to accept as established beyond question the principle that the lives of noncombatants cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unresisting merchantman, and to recognize the obligation to take sufficient precaution to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is in fact of belligerent nationality or is in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag.

The Government of the United States therefore deems it reasonable to expect that the Imperial German Government will adopt the measures necessary to put these principles into practice in respect of the safeguarding of American lives and American ships, and asks for assurances that this will be done.

BERLIN STIRRED BY BRYAN RESIGNATION VON WIEGAND SAYS

Germans Feared It Portended Break With United States, Post-Dispatch Man Reports.

CAN'T SEE AMERICAN VIEW

Teuton Public Heartily Approves Submarine Warfare—Resignation Might Mean Crisis.

By Karl H. von Wiegand, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.
BERLIN, June 9, via London, June 11.—The resignation of Bryan is the sensation of the day. The news was contained in a four-word dispatch from London, printed in a noon paper. Small as the item was, it created a big stir, especially in governmental circles, the general public not realising the possible significance attached until some hours later.

The noon papers had nothing but "Secretary Bryan has resigned," and it was the biggest political news since the declaration of war by Italy. In governmental circles the resignation was quickly attributed to differences with President Wilson over the note to Germany. This was confirmed by meager additional details in the afternoon papers in the form of a Reuter dispatch.

From the moment of the announcement in the noon papers, the American embassy became of great interest to German newspapers. Ambassador Gerard, however, had no information other than papers and dispatches received by American correspondents in Berlin, and had no word from the State Department in three days, and aside from press dispatches, had not even authentic advice that President Wilson was about to send a note to Germany, except a cablegram to me from the Post-Dispatch. The Ambassador could tell inquirers only that he was as much surprised as were the Germans.

The announcement of the resignation together with the confirmation a few hours later, of what already had been surmised, struck a note of gravity in the German-American situation, which, so far, it had not contained. In governmental quarters the greatest reserve was exercised when I endeavored to sound officials on the impression made by the resignation. It was evident that some, at least, regarded it as an ominous foreboding of a break in the relations of the two countries looms up in the eyes of those who still now were disinclined to view the situation in that light.

This is undoubtedly due largely to the fact that the German public has no idea whatever of the state of the public mind in America, and the Government is but little better informed. The Government cannot communicate officially with Count von Bernstorff, nor he with the Government, and even open communication by wireless is not possible because of the limitations of wireless and the fact that it is all caught by the English and French. The press is wholly dependent for information from America upon the English press, and its American dispatches are always distorted.

Approve Submarine Warfare.

Then, too, doubt is expressed whether President Wilson is fully aware of the state of the public mind in Germany, which not only fully approves Admiral von Tirpitz's warfare, but believes it the most efficient and effective weapon so far used against England, and this belief is shared by the army and navy. In trying to ascertain the impression made by the resignation of Mr. Bryan, I talked today with men in touch with the army, navy and Government, and one of these officials admitted that any of these officials could be regarded as a member of the Government to climb down, in face of the public insistence that the submarine warfare continue, might precipitate a ministerial crisis.

An important military officer said: "Of course, if America deliberately places Germany in a position where a break is inevitable, we can do nothing to prevent it, but we do not wish it any more than Germany does."

"We have enough enemies; it would be madness to bring more upon us. If it can be avoided in any way consistent with our honor and prestige."

"War would be senseless." "War between America and Germany, or even a diplomatic break, is so unnecessary, if both sides remain in their right senses, that I simply cannot believe in it."

"Some way must be found out of this, and I am sure it can be found if there is good will and friendly intention on both sides."

Probably the greatest difficulty is the fact that the Germans simply cannot see the American viewpoint. The papers are printing accounts of Mr. Bryan's career, but few of them seem to appreciate the irony of the situation—that the man whom they particularly regard in President Wilson's Cabinet as against Germany, and attacked as pro-German, resigned because he disapproved of measures that might lead to trouble with Germany.

The Tagessblatt's afternoon edition urges reserve until the reasons for Bryan's resignation are better known.

Expected An Ultimatum.

The Vorwarts says Bryan always has been a Utopian peace enthusiast, and that his leaving the Cabinet so means undoubtedly that the note, in the form planned by President Wilson, will not lack much of being an ultimatum to Germany.

"We therefore have to do with an event of the greatest importance," the Vorwarts says.

Count von Reventlow, in the Tagessblatt repeats that Germany cannot recede in any degree from the standpoint already taken, no matter what President Wilson's note may demand. Even the intimation that Germany would consider abandoning her submarine warfare, this writer declares, would be considered by the entire country as an insult.

Die Post, in its issue of today, calls attention to the sailing of steamships with both munitions of war and passengers on board, saying in this connection: "Our submarines must destroy these munitions, and whence they come and who does a good business in them is immaterial. If England does not hasten to carry passengers on board the same ship with this war material, it is not possible for us to fulfill our duties without destroying innocent human lives. The responsibility for the mishap rests on England alone."

Lusitania Sinking a Warning.

"If England will not let herself be warned by the destruction of the Lusitania, and if she persists in this course, it is her affair. And when England later indulges in hypocritical complaint that we Germans did not spare innocent civilians, we cannot see the fairness in this point of view."

In discussing the resignation of Bryan, the Tagessblatt, while not imputing to him pro-German sympathies, and declaring that at times he even has seemed less friendly than President Wilson, assumes that his political experience "recollected from sharp action."

Germania, a Catholic organ, thinks Bryan's retirement means important changes in the American policy, which probably will be favorable to German interests.

Count von Reventlow, in the Tagessblatt repeats that Germany cannot recede in any degree from the standpoint already taken, no matter what President Wilson's note may demand. Even the intimation that Germany would consider abandoning her submarine warfare, this writer declares, would be considered by the entire country as an insult.

Text of German Reply To First American Note

FOLLOWING is the full text of the German reply, under date May 30, to the first American note on the sinking of the Lusitania to which the American reply made public today is

"The undersigned has the honor to submit to Ambassador Gerard the following answer to the communication of May 15, regarding the injury to American interests through German submarine warfare:

"The Imperial Government has submitted the communication of the American Government to a thorough investigation. It entertains, also, a keen wish to co-operate in a frank and friendly way in clearing up a possible misunderstanding which may have arisen in the relations between the two Governments through the events mentioned by the American Government."

"Regarding, firstly, the cases of the American steamers Cushing and Guilford, the American Embassy has already been informed that the German Government has no intention of submitting neutral ships in the war zone, which are guilty of no hostile acts, to attacks by a submarine or submarines or aviators. On the contrary, the German Government has repeatedly been instructed most specifically to avoid attacks on such ships."

"If neutral ships in recent months have suffered through the German submarine warfare, owing to mistakes in identification, it is a question only of quite isolated and exceptional cases, which can be attributed to the British Government's abuse of flags, together with the suspicions of culpable behavior of the masters of the ships."

"The German Government in all cases in which it has been shown by its investigations that a neutral ship, not itself at fault, was damaged by German submarines or aviators, has expressed regret over the unfortunate accident, and, if justified by conditions, has offered indemnification."

"The cases of the Cushing and Guilford will be treated on the same principles. An investigation of both cases is in progress, the result of which will presently be communicated to the embassy. The investigation can, if necessary, be supplemented by an international commission of inquiry, as provided by article III, of The Hague agreement of Oct. 18, 1907."

"When sinking the British steamer Falaba, the commander of the German submarine had the intention of saving the passengers and crew a full opportunity for a safe escape. Only when the master did not obey the order to heave to, but fled and summoned help by rocket signals, did the German commander order the crew and passengers by signals and messages to leave the ship within 10 minutes. He actually allowed them 20 minutes' time and fired the torpedo only when suspicious craft was hastening to the assistance of the Falaba."

"Regarding the loss of life by the sinking of the British passenger steamer Lusitania, the German Government has already expressed to the neutral Governments concerned its keen regret that citizens of their states lost their lives."

"On this occasion the Imperial Government, however, cannot escape the impression that certain important facts having a direct bearing on the sinking of the Lusitania may have escaped the attention of the American Government."

"In the interest of a clear and complete understanding, which is the aim of both Governments, the Imperial German Government considers it first necessary to convince itself that the information accessible to both Governments about the facts of the case is complete and in accord."

"The Government of the United States proceeds on the assumption that the Lusitania was an ordinary unarmed merchantman. The Imperial Government allows itself, in this connection, to point out that the Lusitania was one of the largest and fastest British merchant ships, built by the Government as an auxiliary cruiser, and carried expressly as such in the 'navy list,' issued by the British Admiralty."

"It is further known to the Imperial Government that the Lusitania was carrying a large quantity of munitions of war, and that she was also carrying a large number of troops."

"The Imperial Government, while withholding its final decision on the demands advanced in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania, until receipt of an answer from the American Government, feels impelled, in conclusion, to recall here and now, that it took cognizance with satisfaction of the mediatory proposals submitted by the United States Government to Berlin and London, as a basis for a modus vivendi for conducting the maritime warfare between Germany and Great Britain. The Imperial Government, by its readiness to enter upon a discussion of these proposals, then demonstrated its good intentions in ample fashion. The realization of these proposals was defeated, as is well known, by the declinatory attitude of the British Government."

"The undersigned takes occasion, etc. JAGOW."

U. S. WANTS TREATIES CHANGED TO MEET NEW SEAMAN'S LAW

Several Foreign Countries Contend That Provisions Affecting Standard of Labor Affect Them.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The United States has instructed its diplomats abroad to ask for the amendment of those paragraphs of commercial treaties which conflict with the new seaman's law.

As the seaman's law does not become effective until March, 1916, for foreign ships, there is much time for diplomatic exchanges. President Wilson, after careful consideration signed the bill during the closing hours of the last Congress and let it become known he thought he could handle the objections to it, with full recognition of the rights of other nations.

Germany, Great Britain, Italy, France and Belgium and other nations with which the United States has commerce and navigation treaties made representations that the provisions raising the standards of labor and affecting the equipment of ships which visit American waters, conflicted with their rights under treaties.

Socialists of Germany held in Brunswick a meeting in regard to the war or the price of food have been prohibited throughout Germany by the army authorities.

GOVERNMENT ASKS FOR REVIEW OF CUSTOMS DISCOUNT CASE

$20,000,000 in Duties Must Be Refused Unless Supreme Court Reverses Decision.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Solicitor General Davis filed today an application for Supreme Court review of the 5 per cent customs discount case recently decided against the Government in the Customs Court.

The decision nullified the provision of the tariff law granting a 5 per cent reduction on all imports in American ships, the application contends, by holding that the same discount must be given to all nations with which the United States has "favored nation" treaties.

Unless the Supreme Court reverses the decision about $20,000,000 in duties already collected must be refunded.

PRESIDENT'S REPLY TO GERMANY IS APPROVED BY MARSHALL

Vice President Says He Will Be Disappointed if Kaiser Does Not Contemplate Withdrawing.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 11.—"I have read with a very great deal of pleasure and satisfaction today the official communication to the German Government," said Vice-President Marshall.

"I shall be greatly surprised if there shall be found any large number of men in America who do not fully approve of its tone and contents."

"The President is meeting conditions and no difference how much we may all desire arbitration and universal peace, conditions are not changed by such desires. He speaks the voice of our common humanity. And I shall be greatly disappointed if the German Government does not coincide with his views."

"The President did not consent to a principle which would not put the Government before an American wherever he may lawfully be, however unwise that American's conduct."

MILITIA RESTORES ORDER FOLLOWING ILLINOIS LYNCHING

Three Companies Reach Johnston City, Where John Stranzo Was Hanged for Complicity in Murder of Farmer, and Assume Control of Situation.

CORONER'S JURY DOES NOT FIX BLAME

Verdict Says Sicilian Was Hanged by Persons Unknown to Jurors—Stranzo Confessed Complicity in Shooting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOHNSTON CITY, Ill., June 11.—Order has been restored by the militia here, following the rioting yesterday and the lynching of John Stranzo, suspected of complicity in the killing of W. E. Chapman and the wounding of his daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Schull. Wednesday night, it is believed that there is no further danger of a race war, which was feared when Sheriff Harris yesterday afternoon asked Gov. Dunne to send troops.

An inquest was held today by Coroner Strike. The verdict was that Stranzo was hanged by persons to the jury unknown.

E. N. True testified that he was within a few feet of Stranzo when he was lynched. After being drawn up once he was given a chance to confess, but declared his innocence. After being drawn up a second time and lowered, he said the shooting was done by another person, whose name he gave. Asked if he would go with the lynchers to get this man, he said he would die first. He was then swung up a third time and was strangled to death.

Wants Troops Withdrawn.

Chief Deputy Sheriff A. A. Shaffer of Williamson County asked Assistant Adjutant-General Standen over the long distance telephone this forenoon to have the troops withdrawn. He said the situation was well in hand and there would be no more trouble. He was told to talk to Adjutant-General Dixon, who is in command at Johnston City.

Three Militia Companies Arrive.

Militia companies from Shelbyville, Benton and Cairo arrived in Johnston City during the night, to prevent a threatened race riot. The companies, which were sent to Johnston City yesterday afternoon by Stranzo, who was suspected of having been implicated in the killing of W. E. Chapman and the wounding of his daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Schull, the night before.

The militia were sent to Johnston City to prevent a race riot. The companies, which were sent to Johnston City yesterday afternoon by Stranzo, who was suspected of having been implicated in the killing of W. E. Chapman and the wounding of his daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Schull, the night before.

He was arrested yesterday forenoon and locked up at the city jail. A mob gathered and there were threats of lynching. Mayor E. J. Smith called on Sheriff Harris at Marion for assistance. Before the Sheriff and his deputies arrived the mob broke into the jail with crowbars at 3 o'clock and dragged Stranzo out.

He was taken through the streets to a barn near the Illinois border, where a rope was looped about his neck and thrown over a rafter. He was given an opportunity to confess but maintained his innocence. He was drawn up and lowered and again given an opportunity to confess.

Said to Have Named Slayer.

He is said to have admitted that he had knowledge of the plot to kill Schull and to have named another Sicilian as the one who fired the shot. He was then drawn up a second time and his body was left suspended until the Sheriff arrived and cut it down and sent it to an undertaker.

During the lynching there was some fighting between members of the mob and friends of Stranzo, who sought to save him and some were hurt.

The danger of further outbreaks was so great that Sheriff Harris called upon Gov. Dunne for help, and the Governor ordered out the three companies of militia.

Among the men who did the lynching are some of the most prominent citizens of the town. The killing of Chapman and the wounding of his daughter occurred in the vicinity of Johnston from ambush in the past year, all of which were attributed to the foreign miners.

Joe Bingo, another suspect, was arrested last night and taken to Marion. He was taken there by other Sicilians, arrested earlier, who were to accompany him for safe keeping.

Johnston City has a population of about 600. There is a large element of foreign coal miners. The town is dry, but there are several "blind tigers," in some of which killings have occurred.

Adjutant-General Dixon of the Illinois National Guard, who was at Cairo, was taken to Johnston City last night by special train and took charge of the militia.

BREWERY "SCOUT" SUGGESTED THAT MISSING WITNESS IN SCHRAMM CASE

Max Weber Wanted Because of Alleged Statement That "We Pay for Names."

It was learned by a Post-Dispatch reporter today that the missing witness, whose absence caused an indefinite adjournment, yesterday, of the aldermanic inquiry into Assessor Schramm's office, is Max Weber, "scout" for the National and Empire breweries of the Independent Brewing Co.

The aldermen wish to ask Weber whether it is true that, as he is reported to have told a retiring employee of the Assessor's office, breweries have been paying employees of that office, at the rate of $7.50 a name, for placing names fraudulently on the assessor's records, in cases where it is desired to qualify them, as signers of saloon petitions.

Weber has been unsuccessfully sought for two weeks by Sergeant-at-Arms Matthews of the Board of Aldermen, and by Deputy City Marshals, who have been unable to learn even his residence address. His employers have said repeatedly, in answer to inquiries, that Weber is in the city, and that he may appear at either of the breweries at almost any time, but he has never appeared there in the weary hours that the city employees have spent in watching for him.

Weber is said to live in some of the southwestern suburbs, but inquiry in Maple Heights and points as far out on the Frisco line as Valley Park, has failed to fix his place of abode definitely.

The duties of a brewery "scout" are to search for Weber where he learned, are to seek locations for new saloons, and to circulate petitions in neighborhoods where it is decided to start saloons. The latter sort of work is done by E. J. Hardy, who has figured in three inquiries, now pending before the grand jury, as the obtainer of petitions under irregular and in some cases fraudulent circumstances.

Associate City Counselor Davies, who is conducting the Schramm inquiry, got from retiring employee of the Assessor's office the information which caused him to begin a search for Weber. This city employee told Davies that he had frequently seen Weber in the Assessor's office, and was slightly acquainted with him, and that Weber came to him and said:

"I'm sorry you're going. It will hurt us. They'll sting us now."

The other asked what he meant, and Weber is said to have replied: "Don't you know we've been paying $7.50 a head for names? Sure we have."

"Paying for names," according to Davies, can only mean that money was paid for the fraudulent placing of names on the record. The legitimate service of looking up names on saloon petitions, as is performed without charge.

"Paying for names," as a name placed fraudulently on the Assessor's records was the case of David H. Kaufman, tailor at 203 Lafayette avenue, of which the Post-Dispatch first told a week ago. Kaufman yesterday, at the Schramm hearing, swore that he never made a tax return, and that the signature on the return blank, purporting to be his, was a forgery. A still stronger point in his testimony was the statement that on Dec. 21, the date when the return was certified as having been made, he was not a tenant of the Lafayette avenue place, and had not thought of moving there. The return blank bears the Lafayette avenue address.

Arrested Man Declares He Found Documents on Train—Police to Suggest Dropping Case.

William N. Nelson, 32 years old, a newspaper tender on the Memphis branch of the Frisco, was brought to St. Louis this morning to answer a charge of having in his possession five notes aggregating $307.53, which were stolen two weeks ago from the desk of E. J. Lang, a wholesale liquor dealer at Fourth and Elm streets.

Nelson explained that he found the notes in the coach in which he kept his stock, and that he showed them to a traveling man, who advised him to write to J. H. Craft of Bonne Terre, Mo., who was the maker of three of the notes. He said the traveling man suggested he might get a reward for finding them.

The police said Nelson's explanation was a plausible one, and that the fact that Nelson had written to Craft was a circumstance in his favor. They said they would suggest to Lang that he withdraw prosecution.

NO MORE SALARY INCREASES FOR CITY EMPLOYEES UNTIL OCTOBER

Board of Estimate Will Withhold Approval From All Bills With Few Exceptions.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment, comprised of Mayor Kiel, Controller Player and President Haller of the Board of Aldermen, met this morning and decided to withhold approval from all bills for increases in salaries and the creation of new offices, with few exceptions, until Oct. 1.

Mayor Kiel and President Haller indicated that they would approve the bill providing for municipal inspection of electric wiring, together with the appropriation of $20,000 necessary to carry it into effect. The bill would provide for one electric inspector, 10 deputy inspectors, clerk and stenographer. The inspectors would inspect the wiring of all houses in the city. This work is now done by the Fire Prevention Bureau, which makes a charge of $1 for each inspection.

The board already has recommended the increase in Miss Charlotte Rumsey's salary from $1500 to $2000 a year. It has also recommended that Director of Athletics Rodow Abeken, be allowed an increase from $1500 to $1800 a year.

Bryan Asks American People to Pass Judgment Upon Issue Between Him and President

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 11. APPEALING to the American people on the issue between President Wilson and himself in regard to the questions between the United States and Germany, William J. Bryan has made the following statement:

To the American People:

You now have before you the text of the note to Germany—the note which it would have been my official duty to sign had I remained Secretary of State. I ask you to sit in judgment upon my decision to resign rather than to share responsibility for it.

I am sure you will credit me with honorable motives, but that is not enough. Good intentions could not atone for a mistake as serious as this, and a subject and under such circumstances. If your verdict is against me, I ask no mercy; I desire none if I have acted unwisely.

A man in public life must act according to his conscience, but how ever conscientious he is, he must be prepared to accept without complaint any condemnation which his own errors may bring upon him; he must be willing to bear any deserved punishment from ostracism to execution. But hear me before you pass sentence.

The President and I agree in purpose; we desire a peaceful solution of the dispute which has arisen between the United States and Germany. We not only desire it, but with equal fervor we pray for it, but we differ irreconcilably as to the means of securing it. If it were merely a personal difference it would be a matter of little moment, for all the presumptions are on his side—the presumptions that go with age and authority. It is your President, I am a private citizen without office or title—but one of the 100,000,000 of inhabitants.

But the real issue is not between persons; it is between the old and the new. It is between the old system of international law, which is based upon the strength of the position taken. Among the influences which the Governments employ in dealing with each other are two which are pre-eminent and antagonistic—force and persuasion. Force speaks with firmness and acts through the ultimatum; persuasion employs argument, courts investigation and depends upon negotiation. Force represents the old system—the system that must pass away; persuasion represents the new system—the system that is being born.

Force is growing, all too slowly, it is true, but growing for 100 years. The old system was at its best a little better than war at its worst; the new system contemplates a universal brotherhood, established through the uplifting power of example.

If I correctly interpret the note to Germany, it conforms to the standards of the old system rather than to the rules of the new, and I cheerfully admit that it is abundantly supported by the precedents written in characters of blood upon almost every page of human history. Austria furnishes the most recent precedent; it was Austria's firmness that dictated the ultimatum against Serbia, which made the world a war.

Every ruler now participating in this unparalleled conflict has proclaimed his desire for peace and denied responsibility for the war, and it is only charitable that we should credit all of it according to the idealism for universal brotherhood of men to unemotional understandings of international law.

This same change has taken place in the foremost peace organization of the world, the Carnegie Endowment of International Peace, backed by $100,000 of Andrew Carnegie's money. Its activities now are confined almost exclusively to developing the principles and potency of law. Dr. James Brown Scott, its secretary and director of the division of law, who is also special adviser to the State Department, announces in the endowment's latest report his belief that "international peace can only be based on justice and that potent factors in bringing about a lasting peace between nations are the development of a system of international law adequate to meet the needs of nations and the dissemination of just and enlightened principles."

Administration Still Collecting Data for Note to Great Britain.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—It was stated officially today at the State Department that while officials had been for more than two months assembling data on which to base a new note to Great Britain on interruptions to American commerce by British naval operations, there was as yet no indication of when the new communication would be ready for transmission to London.

There are many cases of ships and cargoes delayed to be studied. The task of reducing them to a comprehensive note of not too great length is one that requires time. It is intended that the new representatives shall be so complete in details as to preclude protected discussion.

As yet Great Britain has made no reply to the last American note on the subject of the Government's refusal to furnish orders in Council. There is a belief in some quarters here that it is unlikely a reply will be made while the situation between the United States and Germany continues. That situation, however, it is said, would not influence the Washington Government in drafting the new communication, and it was intimated that the note might go forward as soon as it was completed without regard to the status of the negotiations with Berlin.

GRAND JURY HEARS A SECRET WITNESS IN LUSITANIA CASE

Inquiry Into Affidavits Adjoined Temporarily After Important Testimony Is Given.

JURORS' GOAL OUTLINED

Effort Will Be Made to Determine for Whom Detective, Who Obtained Statements, Was Acting.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The Federal grand jury, which yesterday began an investigation to determine whether there was an attempt to defraud the United States in connection with the affidavits submitted to the Government to prove that the steamship Lusitania was armed, examined one witness today and temporarily adjourned.

The investigation has thus far resulted in the arrest on the charge of perjury of Gustav Stahl, a German reservist, who made one of the affidavits, but it was intimated today that results much more far-reaching were expected by the Federal authorities.

While the inquiry is specifically directed against Paul Koenig, a detective employed by the Hamburg-American steamship line and through whose hands Stahl's affidavit is alleged to have passed, the Government authorities indicated that they were seeking to find out who Koenig was acting for.

Name of Witness Secret.

The name of today's grand jury witness was kept a secret. But his testimony was said to be important. Stahl, who was taken into custody yesterday, immediately on the conclusion of his testimony before the jury, was still in the Tombs today for lack of a bondsman to furnish $10,000 bail.

In a note written in German and addressed to the newspaper men Stahl said he had told only the truth and had nothing to fear from the investigation.

Roger B. Wood, Assistant United States District Attorney, who is directing the inquiry, said that the grand jury would follow the evidence as far as it might lead. He declined to make any prediction as to who might become involved.

It was stated today that Koenig revealed to customs officials here the fact that Stahl was in Albany after agents of the Department of Justice. Stahl's proceedings against Koenig were initiated to establish the charge that he used improper influence to induce Stahl to make his affidavit.

Stahl was found day before yesterday in Albany, and immediately brought here. Stahl's affidavit was kept under close surveillance by Federal agents and submitted to a searching examination. Certain information which Stahl furnished, together with other evidence collected in the case, is understood to have led to the apprehension of Stahl yesterday, which met yesterday. It was intimated, however, that when called upon before the jury to repeat this information Stahl was not so communicative.

Hamburg American Line Lawyers.

During the two days since he was brought back here he was permitted to consult counsel and was in consultation with Edward Sandford, who acted as attorney for the Hamburg-American line in the Government suit against it charging violation of the neutrality law.

When arraigned before United States Commissioner Houghton after his arrest he asked that Mr. Sandford be communicated with.

"Mr. Stenier (Koenig) got him for me," he told the commissioner in German.

Questioned about the case last night, Sandford said that he was acting for Koenig in the case and would get Stahl another lawyer. Koenig had nothing to conceal in the matter, he declared, and had already given full information to the Government authorities.

Josephine Weir, Anton Griese and a man named Bruchner who also made affidavits in the Lusitania case, have been questioned by agents of the Department of Justice and can be summoned before the grand jury if their testimony is desired. Their affidavits today corroborate Stahl's statement that the Lusitania was armed.

MISTAKE NETS MAN $1400

Broker Buys Wrong Stock, but It Makes Quick Advance.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Through a misunderstanding, a young broker, who represents on the curb a Stock Exchange firm, made a profit of $1400 yesterday. Called to the telephone shortly after the opening of the market, one of the members of the firm gave him permission to buy 500 shares of Cramp Shipbuilding. The youthful broker confused the stock with Electric Boat and reported a purchase at $1 to his chief. The latter, after soundly berating him, said:

"You will have to take the trade upon yourself and stand the loss." The young man returned to the curb and found Electric Boat selling at $2. Then, to his chagrin, he had forgotten the name of the man of whom he had bought the 500 shares, and for a time it looked as if he were deep in the hole, as the stock had advanced to $3, but the broker who had made the original sale confirmed the transaction.

the internment of the Prins Eitel and the giving of his written parole, no officers or men have been severed from the ship.

The Commander's assertion that Lieut. Brauer and any others who may not now be of the crew of the Prins Eitel Friedrich left the ship before her internment and while she was at Newport News, suggests two interviews which I had with the Commander shortly after the ship arrived at Newport News, which should be here stated.

"The Commander when offered by me the privilege of landing at Newport News for any personal business he might have after having been at sea for several months, said he could not leave his ship, asserting that this not only applied to himself but also to his officers and men who must remain on board."

"I was advised by Rear Admiral Beatty that he had transmitted permission to the Commander of the Prins Eitel Friedrich for the visiting ashore in restricted territory of the Eitel officers and that permission had been given for the landing of men when accompanied by a guard, either from Fort Monroe or the navy, these guards to be furnished upon the application of the Commander of the Eitel."

"Under these conditions officers and men landed and were ashore prior to the internment and the giving by the Commander of his written parole to Rear Admiral Beatty at the Norfolk navy yard."

In connection with Collector Hamilton's report, it became known, although it was not announced, that he made it on May 11. No explanation was made of why it was made public at this time. It was believed, however, that cable dispatches telling of the arrest on an Italian steamer of a man said to

PROF. USHER WEARY OF BEING JINX IN DIPLOMATIC CRISIS

Says Position Has Been Made Unpleasant by German Interpretation of Writings.

Prof. Roland G. Usher is weary of appearing as the jinx in the relations of Germany and the United States. He said as much yesterday, when he read a dispatch from Berlin, saying that the position of Americans in Berlin had been rendered unpleasant by the reprinting there of an article which appeared in the Fatherland of New York. The Fatherland's article cited Prof. Usher as authority for the statement that a secret alliance exists between the United States and Great Britain. On the strength of this same alleged utterance of Usher's, a German naval critic, Count von Reventlow, has lately opposed any concessions to America in the matters now under diplomatic discussion between the two countries.

All this is based on a paragraph in Prof. Usher's "Pan-Germanism," published in 1913, which said that England and France "made overtures to the United States which resulted, probably before the summer of 1917, in an understanding between the three countries." No paper of any sort was signed, he wrote, and no pledges given which circumstances might not modify, but "an understanding was reached that, in case of a war begun by Germany or Austria for the purpose of executing Pan-Germanism, the United States would promptly declare in favor of England and France and would do her utmost to assist them." So long as the conditions continued which made this agreement advantageous, he wrote, "the alliance for it was nothing less," would be likely to remain unaltered.

Meaning Was Misunderstood. Prof. Usher said yesterday, in regard to the use lately made of this statement:

"The German Press Bureau is obviously, for political reasons, seizing upon the slightest thing available. My assertion, in 'Pan-Germanism,' as to an Anglo-American understanding, is just enough for these people to hang an assertion on."

"The only thing which made it possible to regard it as an alliance was the expectation that, if the same conditions continued, the attitude of the various parties to the understanding would continue. That was all I meant, and it was all I said."

Understanding Was Vague. "It was never more than the vaguest kind of a vague understanding, and while I am perfectly certain that it existed at the time I named, I am equally certain it is not recognized now, and I don't believe Great Britain has at any time expected us to recognize it under present conditions."

"I am held responsible in Germany for having caused unfavorable opinion in the United States, and in England as well, against Germany. The German Press Bureau wishes to discredit me if it can. It can say, 'Here's your prophet—he told of an alliance, and there is no alliance—what a kind of a prophet is he?' Or it can, as it is just now doing, subscribe to the assertion that an alliance now exists, and wrongly cite me as authority. In the former case it discredits me, and in the latter case it discredits the United States, and the German Press Bureau is pleased to do either."

FINAL APPEAL TO NEW YORK
COURTS MADE FOR BECKER

Condemned Man's Lawyer Submits Brief on Motion for Re-Argument of Case.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The last appeal to the courts of New York for the life of Charles Becker, sentenced to die in Sing Sing prison during the week of July 12, for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was made yesterday, when his counsel, Martin T. Manton, forwarded to the Court of Appeals at Albany a brief on a motion for the re-argument of the case.

The brief says that, inasmuch as Rosenthal had threatened to expose Becker in a New York newspaper, Becker must have known that an attack on Rosenthal at that time would be attributed to his agency. The question that should have been presented to the jury, states the brief, was whether Jack Rose, the informer, who hired the gunmen, was animated by a desire to save his own life, which was already imperiled, or if he engaged the gunmen at the instance of Becker to kill Rosenthal.

The only purpose of the crime in the latter contingency, it is argued, would have been to prevent Rosenthal from doing something which had already been done—publish charges against Becker, and from attempting something he could not accomplish—Becker's indictment for bribery and his removal from office.

OTTOFY WANTS TO SEE CAMPBELL LETTERS TO LOIS

Judge Kinsey Rules if He Wishes to Determine Genuineness
He Must So Specify.

Judge Kinsey today overruled a motion filed yesterday by Attorney L. Frank Ottofy asking that he be permitted to see and examine 29 exhibits filed with the clerk by the defense in the James Campbell will contest case. The judge said he would modify his order if Ottofy would specify the exhibits he wished to see.

Ottoby was attorney for the plaintiffs in the unsuccessful contest and a motion for a new trial is pending. He told the court he wanted to have experts examine letters from Campbell to his daughter, Lois, now Mrs. Elsey G. Burkham, which were introduced by the defense, with a view to determining their genuineness.

Judge Kinsey told Ottofy if he would file a new motion asking permission to see the letters he would be permitted to examine them in the courtroom, but would not be permitted to take them from the clerk's custody.

TRAPPED BURGLAR WAS A MOUSE

But It Took a Wagon Load of Policemen to Find It Out.

A telephone message to the Wyoming Street Police District at 11:30 o'clock last night informed the office force that a burglar was trapped in a clothes closet in the home of Walter R. Purcell, 3905 Wyoming street.

The message was relayed to the Magnolia Avenue Station and a wagonload of patrolmen was sent to the Purcell home. Patrolmen drew their revolvers and tiptoed to the closet while the excited members of the Purcell family looked on. The closet door was opened cautiously and out popped—a mouse.

M'CORMICK HAD NO REGULAR SCHEDULE OF DRINKS, HE SAYS

Wife's Lawyer in Divorce Suit Fails to Ruffle New York Prosecutor by Questions.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 11.—How much intoxicants a normal man may assimilate without becoming "lit up," and how they affect different temperaments, were questions threshed over in the trial of the separation suit of Mrs. Frances Busby McCormick against Deputy Assistant District Attorney Robert G. McCormick before Justice Blanchard yesterday.

Earlier in the trial McCormick testified he had been a drinking man for 26 years and Mirabeau L. Towns, attorney for the wife, began his cross-examination by trying to learn just how much intoxicants McCormick consumed daily.

Mrs. McCormick, in plain black gown, listened attentively and supplied dates, names and places when McCormick failed to remember them, and although some of the questions she suggested were exceedingly pointed the prosecutor remained unruffled throughout and was most considerate of his wife.

After vainly trying to show that, as she expressed it, the witness frequently took "hookers" in the morning, Towns demanded to know when he did begin his day's drinking.

"Never until I was through work at the District Attorney's office," was the reply.

"On your way home how many did you take?" "Sometimes one, sometimes two, sometimes three, and occasionally more."

Felt Effects After First Drink.

"As a matter of fact, didn't you visit all the saloons in the neighborhood of the Criminal Courts Building?" "I did not."

"Isn't there one on every corner?" "Not at all; there are 12 corners and only five cafes."

The attorney wanted to know when McCormick felt the effects of the liquor, and the witness replied after the first drink. The effect was to make him more cheerful, he said.

"Did you ever have remorse, or katzenjammer, as the Germans call it, after a night of drinking?" "Oh, yes, but never after I married. It was many years ago I had remorse. By the way, I've been thinking it over, and I've decided for 20 years, and not 2."

One night McCormick remained late at his office and when he returned to his home in Bronxville his wife accused him of being drunk. This hurt his feelings, he said.

"Well, isn't it true that you were very much obfuscated?" "What's that?" "Ebbosled, spifflicated, lit up," "I had a few drinks," replied McCormick seriously, "and my wife smelled it and asked me if I hadn't been drinking."

"Now, isn't it true," went on the lawyer, "that your wife said to you, 'Bob, where did you get that breath?' " "Not at all, but I will admit she was angry."

Went to Club Next Day.

Getting down to the time McCormick slept on the floor because, after he had given $200 to the Whitman campaign fund against the wishes of Mrs. McCormick, the latter pummeled him so he couldn't sleep, Towns asked McCormick if he hadn't been drinking that night.

"I had a few before I went home," was the reply, "and she said I was drunk."

"Weren't you just as happy on the floor?" "I went to the Republican Club next day and stayed."

Towns reverted to another time McCormick left his wife after a quarrel and put up at the Hotel McAlpin.

"Quite a good many sports go there, don't they?" he asked. "Also a large number of refined people. I didn't go there for the other class," McCormick answered.

"How many times did you desert your wife to go there?" "I never deserted her. The time you speak of she told me if I left the house she would lock me out, so I didn't return."

"Weren't you glad of the excuse?" "Oh, no."

Towns tried to show that during one summer, when the couple lived at Seagate, McCormick joined the Atlantic Yacht Club because that was the only place in that restricted residential neighborhood, where he could get a drink, but the witness protested that his drinking there was incidental.

"Did they have good liquor?" asked the lawyer. "They did," answered the witness.

"Did you get anything to drink anywhere else?" "Yes, at the Oriental Hotel, four miles away."

"At which place was the liquor the best?" "Well, I should say it was better at the Oriental."

Wife Looked the Same.

This led to inquiry as to how many whiskies or other drinks the witness could take without "becoming obfuscated." He felt the first drink slightly, the second more, and the third still more.

"How many did you take in the course of an evening?" "Oh, sometimes one, sometimes a couple, sometimes three or more, and sometimes not any. I didn't count them."

"Did Mrs. McCormick look the same to you after three drinks?" "Oh, certainly."

"Not lovelier?" "No, just the same."

In his direct examination McCormick said the trouble originated with his wife's family, and that it had increased when Mrs. Duncan L. Busby, mother of Mrs. McCormick, went to live with them in Bronxville.

"Instead of Mother Busby making trouble, didn't she generally side with you—weren't you her 'white-haired boy'?" asked Mr. Towns.

"I was fond of her and she sometimes sided with me, but when my wife made fun of me, she took her part."

Jennie Kelly, a maid, who had been in the McCormick home for several months, testified that she had never seen her employer drunk. Nor had he been unkind to his wife, so far as she had observed.

The case is still on trial.

PANAMA SENTENCES MAN WHO ATTACKED U. S. SERGEANT

PANAMA, June 11.—Fernando Castro, brother-in-law of President Porras, was arrested today and fined $25 and sentenced to 30 days in jail for an unprovoked assault upon a Sergeant of the United States army. Castro is a Costa Rican and has been well known in Panama for his anti-American sentiments. The attack took place in an American cafe, where the Sergeant and other American soldiers were dining. Castro was arrested, but the Panama police immediately permitted him to go, while the soldier was held until his release was procured by the American authorities.

Later Castro was taken to court and fined and sentenced to imprisonment.

ONE DEAD IN FT. WORTH FLOOD

1100 Persons Are Homeless; $1,000,000 Bridge System in Danger.

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 11.—Charity organizations today began distributing food and clothing to the 1100 flood refugees here. Although danger to life has passed, fears are expressed that debris, carried by the swollen Trinity River, would damage the $1,000,000 bridge system, completed last year. Part of one structure went out last night, carrying Mrs. Josie Glimmer to her death. Property damage here, exclusive of bridges, is estimated at $500,000. The Trinity today began falling rapidly.

TRIED TO JIMMY EMPTY SAFE

The futility of "wrongdoing" will be further impressed on burglars who visited the Holskamp Lumber Co. office, 630 Fyler avenue, last night, when they tried to open a safe, which they vainly tried to jimmy open, was empty.

These burglars were no "yeggs," and the successful opening of a side door of the office by means of a jimmy, was about their limit in achievement. They then potted with the safe, and knocked off the combination knob, but they couldn't get the safe door open. They littered up the desks and stole a few postage stamps.

WHY NOTE CAUSED BRYAN TO QUIT IS PUZZLE TO EDITORS

New York World Says It Could Not Have Been More Moderate Without Yielding Contentions—Press of Nation Backs President.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, June 11.—Editorial comment of the New York newspapers today on President Wilson's second note to the German Government regarding Germany's submarine warfare follows:
The World: President Wilson's reply to the German note could not have been more moderate and restrained without surrendering the American contention in this controversy.
In the main the note is a reiteration of the principles of international law and the code of humanity which the President defines and upholds in the note of May 13.
The United States stands where it stood in the original protest of Feb. 18 against the German war zone proclamation and in its refusal to recognize the lawless privileges which the German Government attempted to usurp for itself on the high seas at the expense of neutral lives, neutral property and the accepted rules of civilized warfare.
It is apparent that the President is determined to give Germany every chance to put herself in accord with the practices of civilized warfare and to make it as easy as possible for the German Government to accede to the demands of the United States Government.
No conscience less sensitive than that of William J. Bryan—and there are no such sensitive consciences in Germany, or, indeed, in Europe—could possibly be shocked by the President's language or by the tone of his reply. Had it not been for the mad performance of Mr. Bryan in suddenly deciding to create a new heaven and a new earth in international affairs by his personal fiat, we think the note, on the whole, would have been a disappointment to a majority of the American people. They would have expected a harder and a less conciliatory answer to Germany's quibbling and unsatisfactory reply to the President's note of May 13.
It is doubtless well, nevertheless, that the note errs on the side of moderation. This is particularly fortunate in view of the sorry performance of Mr. Bryan.

Let Matters Cool Off, Taft's Comment on Bryan's Action
BOSTON, Mass., June 11.
FORMER President William H. Taft, when asked what he thought of the Bryan letter of explanation of withdrawing from the Cabinet, met the reporter with his usual smile and said everything now should be served cold.
"Newspapers are after scoops and they want everything hot," he said with a twinkle in his eye.
"It seems to me that at this juncture of affairs everything should be served cold. I am a great believer at this time that we should wait for matters to cool off."

More than ever patriotic Americans must admire the constructive skill and dialectic ability with which their representative, the administration of President Wilson, has marshaled the precepts of law and the forces of moral sentiment for the convincing of a great and hitherto almost friendly power, that justice is with us and that the right course is Germany's best course.
The Herald: A great diplomatic crisis in this country was safely passed on Tuesday. How great that crisis was will, perhaps, not be apparent to the great mass of Americans until the secret history of diplomatic negotiations with Germany comes to be written.
The President stands firmly on his original ground. He does not send to Germany an ultimatum. But he formally asks the Imperial Government for "assurances that measures hereafter will be adopted to safeguard American lives and American ships on the high seas." That is the vital line in the message. What will Germany do about it?
The Tribune: Judged in connection with the events of the last few days and measured by the anticipations of a new birth of firmness at Washington, which they excited, the new note to Germany will prove a disappointment.
If Mr. Bryan had chosen to stay in office, after discreetly hinting at a disagreement with his chief, his friends could have pointed to the new note as a distinct concession to his ideas and influence.
So long as the administration still stands for the irreducible minimum of our demands, the country will be arrayed firmly behind it. The nation welcomes every prospect of attaining its ends by peaceful means. But it is determined to attain them, in whatever direction the pursuit of policy may lead.
The Times: The reply to Germany's note is the appeal of a nation of the twentieth century to a nation that has reverted to the principles and practices of the thirteenth. The demands of the Barons which evoked Magna Charta from King John are the demands we now make of Germany, that she recognize the natural principles of justice and humanity, that she acknowledge laws without which men could enjoy no equality of right.
The note makes the path of compliance not steeper, but easier for Germany. No new demand is made, there is none to make for the note of May 13 was comprehensive. No new principles are enunciated. In the earlier note they were set forth fully and in all their indisputable and controlling strength.
The Press: President Wilson's note is sound, firm and all that anybody could ask it to be. Its excellence calls for no praise; its clearness requires little explanation. What Mr. Wilson asks, as we have said of his previous communications with the Imperial Government, and the manner in which he asks it, does not make for war with Germany; it makes for peace.
The American: The Administration's second note to Germany is notable for its self-restraint and pacificatory tone—which is to say, it is notable for its sanity. The note, in fact, opens the way for further consideration of every mooted point. The note invites "assurances" but does not close the door upon arguments. Nothing further removed from an ultimatum in tone or substance could be imagined.

than any temporizing could be. We cannot expect Germany to respect our rights unless we respect theirs ourselves.
Cleveland Leader (Rep.): There is no weakening of the American position, no suggestion of a compromise. The issue for the German Government is the possibility of the submarine or the United States will applaud and support their President to the end, whatever it may be.
Kansas City Star (Prog.): The first impression that Germany gets of the President's note is formed from Mr. Bryan's resignation. In time of peace he is over zealous for peace and you are likely to be an unintended instrument of war.
Buffalo Courier (Dem.): This second note is simply a friendly but firm re-statement of the case by the United States. So strong is it in its simplicity, its calm moderation and its recognition of the rights of humanity that neither the German Government nor any other can make successful issue.
Buffalo Express (Ind. Rep.): If the German Government is at all amenable to argument this note shows it is to abandon its barbarous submarine warfare against merchantmen. The whole nation and, whole world must applaud.
Chicago Tribune (Prog.): The note's phraseology avoids the appearance of dogmatic insistence upon our view of the possible violation of the submarine or implied demand that Germany shall give up its use against all merchantmen.
Worcester Telegram (Dem.): There is no harsh sound about it, no suggestion of war to enforce American claims. The paper is more forceful than the first Lusitania note to Germany, but less liable to irritate the Government on the other side. It waives all quibbling.
Baltimore American (Rep.): Certainly the American people have reason to believe that the end of the practical attacks upon American lives has been reached and that the gentle communication was agreed upon with the German Ambassador in order to further his private activities to stop the assaults without warning upon merchantmen having on board noncombatants.
Springfield (Mass.) Union (Rep.): Both the earlier notes were signed by Mr. Bryan. He could not reasonably expect that the administration would beat a retreat from the stand so clearly assumed, or at least he should not have expected it.
Washington Post (Ind. Dem.): While the United States yield nothing in asking for an assurance that the destruction of American lives shall not occur again, there is nothing in the note at which Germany can take offense and much that points the way toward a friendly adjustment of all differences.

Columbus (O.) State Journal (Rep.): Bryan is a great man and a good one. It would be a loss to the country to have him crushed, but there is danger of it now if the President's plan fails, and the country is given over to slaughter, for Bryan will be held widely accountable for the disaster. The position taken in his note to Germany is unsalvageable.
Lincoln (Neb.) State Journal (Ind. Rep.): It is a plain spoken note, but it would be a loss to the country to have him crushed, but there is danger of it now if the President's plan fails, and the country is given over to slaughter, for Bryan will be held widely accountable for the disaster. The position taken in his note to Germany is unsalvageable.
Philadelphia Public Ledger (Ind. Rep.): If there are those who expected the new note to Germany to be a amicable settlement. One cannot read both notes without a feeling of amazement that Bryan could sign the first note and refuse to attach his name to the second.

that ultimatum they will be disappointed. Its terms are imperative, indeed, but they still leave a possibility of an amicable settlement of the issue.

Chicago Herald (Rep.): The future of our relations with Germany depends upon the German Government and whether it can or will understand the temper and resolution of the American people who will approve with practical unanimity President Wilson's admirable state paper.

Minneapolis Tribune (Rep.): The note causes one to wonder what Mr. Bryan found in it so repugnant to his peace-loving soul as to lead him to withhold his signature at the cost of his retirement to private life. The imperial German Government will have difficulty in becoming angry over the note as Mr. Bryan has.

Boston Globe (Ind.): Mr. Wilson wisely avoids any manifestation of temper. He wisely meets the grave responsibility in upholding the cause of nations now at peace during this staggering assault at the foundation of our civilization.

Pittsburgh Dispatch (Ind.): Contrary to expectations, following Mr. Bryan's action, the note strikes no new note in fact, it is difficult to understand why the former Secretary of State, having approved the earlier note, should have balked at this one.

Pittsburgh Gazette-Times (Rep.): Clearly the President has pointed the way out for Germany without recourse to hostilities or a severance of relations. It all depends upon whether the German Government is anxious to avert further difficulties as the United States is to live in peace with Germany.

GERMAN PAPERS HERE APPROVE TONE OF THE NOTE

Westliche Post Says Everyone Except Sword-Rattlers Will Feel Relief From Danger.

SETTLEMENT EXPECTED

Staats-Zeitung Prints American Flag With Comment; Astonished at Bryan's Action.

OPINIONS expressed by German newspapers in this country, as gathered by the Post-Dispatch, show a pacific attitude in commenting on the President's note and the editors universally express the belief that an amicable settlement of the difficulty will be brought about. The German press voices astonishment at the resignation of Bryan because of the contents of the President's note, which they regard as friendly. Some of the expressions follow:

St. Louis. The Westliche Post: The whole nation, with the exception of those irresponsible and incorrigible jingoists who are not happy unless they have an opportunity for saber rattling, will draw a breath of relief today. The uneasiness over the possible contents of the note of the President to Germany has disappeared. The tone of the document is more peaceful than the first note of May 11 sent to Germany—the Lusitania note—which came perilously near being an ultimatum.

It is particularly pleasant to note the caution with which everything is avoided which could lead Germany to accuse the United States of partiality. The President concedes, which he has not done heretofore, that the German Admiralty has shown honest endeavor to observe the principles of humanity and international law and that the instructions to commanders were in accord with this attitude. He goes further and declares his willingness to have the contentions of the German Government that the Lusitania in fact was a British auxiliary cruiser again thoroughly investigated.

Chicago Staats-Zeitung (printed with American flag and these words: "In this search for German ideals"): The note from our Government to Germany is a very agreeable surprise. It is all the more agreeable because, in view of Mr. Bryan's separation from the Government, the position he took with regard to President Wilson and particularly because of reasons alleged for his resignation, one was directly compelled to assume that Wilson was hurrying against Germany all the while. The note shows that the two nations could be avoided only by Germany's unconditional submission to Washington's boundless demands.

In the note we find neither lightning nor thunder. It is worded in a surprisingly friendly spirit and although allusions are made to the previous and more uncompromising notes, one can clearly see the commendable attempt of the President to modify considerably the uncompromising tone, which made a satisfactory reply to the other document impossible. This note will lead to an agreement with Germany. We must unanimously agree with the President in his statement that the case of the Lusitania is a matter of more than a mere loss of property and a breach of international rights.

Cincinnati Free Press: President Wilson's rejoinder does not appear to change the situation. President Wilson's statement that the Lusitania was unarmed cannot per se dispose of the German allegation. And, until it has been shown through an unprejudiced investigation, as was suggested by ex-Secretary of State Bryan, that the Lusitania was a harmless merchant vessel, no demands ought to be made upon Germany based simply upon an assumption.

Cincinnati Volksblatt: The second note of the President is scarcely more than a copy of the first note. Repetition does not make it more plausible and persuasive. One-eyed neutrality is the conspicuous feature of both notes. It is difficult to see how Germany can comply with such unfair demands, but we trust that she will find some way to satisfy the more than exacting President.

Cleveland. Wacochter and Anseiger: The note apparently gives room for further argument and has not the trend of an ultimatum. Mr. Bryan's resignation seems to have had the effect of toning down the wording of the note. It is not so sharp as it was first represented to be in newspaper notices.

Buffalo Demokrat: While we preach with our mouths about upholding the cause of humanity, we with our hands supply the means of murdering thousands of men. We pretend to work for humanity but in reality we work for nothing but business. Mr. Bryan did right and his action will be approved by all right thinking people. This patriotic talk covers up lots of tricks and madness. The majority of citizens are too sensible not to look behind that talk.

The New Yorker Staats-Zeitung: Surely the tone and contents of the Wilson note are not to be considered in the light of an ultimatum. An ultimatum—that cannot be doubted for a moment—would have meant the immediate break of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States. Now, what if Berlin, first of all asks the question as to why Washington did not proclaim the principle of humanity when England announced its intention to surrender the civil population of Germany to death by starvation, why the talk of humanity was not heard in Washington until Germany had found in her submarines an effective weapon to frustrate this plan?

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 11.—Independent dealers in gasoline in Kansas City will not meet the 1-cent cut in price by the Standard Oil Co. in this territory. They will appeal to the public and maintain the former price of 8.3 cents a gallon, which, they say, is the lowest price at which they can sell at any profit and "live."

The independents decided at a meeting last night that their only recourse was to explain the situation and "throw themselves on the mercy of the public."

Minister at Murphysboro, Ill., Admitted Indiscretion at Hearing Before Church Synod.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., June 11.—The Rev. Charles Day, pastor of the First Lutheran Church, has announced that he will submit his resignation to the congregation next Sunday, as the result of an investigation of his conduct by the Lutheran Synod, in which he admitted hugging Miss Maggie Bets when he called at her home in the country near here several days ago.

The Rev. Mr. Day, against whom charges were preferred by the girl, appeared personally before the investigating body, which was presided over by the Rev. Mr. Dunlap, president of the Synod, and made his admission.

Several weeks ago, and not more than a month after the Rev. Mr. Day accepted the First Lutheran pastorate, charges were preferred against him by Mrs. Peter E. Felsor of Murphysboro, a member of his congregation. She alleged that while on a hay ride he pinched her and made remarks which she resented. The Rev. Mr. Day is married and has one child. He came here from Nebraska City, Neb.

CLAIMS AGAINST KREMB'S ESTATE REACH $150,000

More Than 100 Persons, 35 of Them Women, Appear in Probate Court.

More than 100 claimants, 35 of whom were women, were present in person and others were represented by attorneys, when the Probate Court yesterday afternoon took up claims against the estate of Herman J. Krembs, neighborhood banker of 142 Rutger street, who killed himself last March after a suit for $500 had been filed against him by a widow.

Most of the claimants bore the unmistakable stamp of a life of hard work and they had risked all their savings. The court was asked to allow about $150,000 in claims against the estate, which was $50,000 more than had been generally expected.

That Krembs could have done such an astounding volume of business upon a "shoe-string" surprised even the lawyers in the case.

All the visible assets to cover the $150,000 are 130 pieces of heavily mortgaged real estate and $10,000 life insurance, turned over for the creditors by the widow, Mrs. Lizzie Krembs. The actual value of the property is problematical.

One attorney, A. M. Frum-Lerg, represented 35 creditors, the largest claim of the 35 being one for $450 by Herbert Siemer, a blind man of Waterloo, Ill.

Neither Mrs. Krembs, who is administratrix of the estate, nor her attorney, Arthur E. Kammerer, protested any of the claims. Kammerer estimated the interest due on each as it was passed to Judge Holtcamp. The court spent the entire afternoon on the case.

Claims of $200,000 Allowed. Edward V. P. Schneidermann was attorney for about forty creditors, mostly women, with claims approximating $200,000, which were allowed. He said he had about $20,000 more to present.

One of his clients, Mrs. Josephine Treder, 65 years old, holds a note for $2000 given to her by Krembs. The attorney said the $2000 was her savings, earned by her work as a laundress. Mrs. Treder was in court when the judge allowed her claim and said, "I hope I can get some of my money back."

Another lawyer told Judge Holtcamp that his client, a widow, about 70 years old, had to go to the poorhouse as a result of Krembs' collapse. Krembs got $2000 from her for which she holds an unsecured note. Several of Krembs' clients are members of the St. Vincent's Catholic Church, Ninth and Barry streets, where Krembs was a member.

Mrs. Krembs has turned over, for the benefit of creditors, $15,000 of her husband's life insurance, leaving her $10,000 of the estate. Krembs owned about 130 pieces of real estate in his own name and the names of various "straw men."

This will be seized by the creditors, but it is heavily mortgaged and much of it is considered to be of little value, being cheap real estate property.

A method adopted by Krembs in depositing money in the name of straw men, and in depositing property already heavily mortgaged. Each deed appeared to have been signed by one of the "straw men."

Krembs originally received about $2000 a month in rentals from his property and for a long time was able to pay the interest notes of clients. But he kept adding mortgages to the property, then rents fell off and he was unable to pay. When his clients began to clamor for their money he killed himself.

Krembs took sums as low as $20 from clients. Many claims are under $200. He would give receipts showing that money was left with him "for safe-keeping." In some instances the client did not require payment of interest. In others Krembs took money and promised to invest it in first deeds of trust on desirable realty.

Some of the allowed claims are: Mr. and Mrs. Barney Thole, $100; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Olliges, $50; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lindecke, $50; Paul and Anna Ladovskoy, $50; Elizabeth J. Dittsch, $50; Charles Dittsch, $100; Andrew Dittsch, $100; J. H. Brinkman and wife, $50; J. H. Brinkman Jr., $50; Louis Prentup, $100; Catherine Prentup, $100; Mary Prentup, $50; Elizabeth Hesch, $50; Louis Hesch, $50; Henry A. GRANTED $100 A MONTH ALIMONY

Wife of Laggett & Myers Official Gets Order Pending Divorce Trial.

Mrs. Elsie Lewis of 473 Castleman avenue obtained an order today in Circuit Judge Withrow's court for $100 a month alimony against Clarence Lewis, an assistant superintendent of the Laggett & Myers Tobacco Co., pending trial of her divorce suit. They were married on Oct. 27, 1911, and separated March 3 last, when Mrs. Lewis went to the home of her mother. The petition recites that Lewis drank intoxicants and beat his wife.

At the alimony hearing Mrs. Lewis testified that her husband had an income of $400 a month and owned $25,000 of the stock of the tobacco company.

DOCTOR ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF NOT HAVING A LICENSE

Clark Bruce Says His Methods Are Combination of Spiritualism and Magnetism.

Dr. Clark Bruce, 63 years old, of 3961 Westminster place, was arrested this morning by detectives from the Board of Health on a technical charge of "holding himself out as a physician without a license."

The arrest was made at the home of Mrs. Bruce, a detective of the department, at 3717 Michigan avenue.

Mrs. Bruce said Dr. Bruce called on her at her request Wednesday and diagnosed her supposed ailment as "cancer" of the stomach. His treatment, she said, consisted of rubbing his hands together violently, blowing on them and then placing one hand on her back and the other on her stomach. She was supposed to absorb electricity, she said.

She said he guaranteed to cure her, and said that his fee would be from $2 to $25. She said she paid him $2.

Dr. Bruce said he was licensed to practice medicine in Illinois, but stopped practicing in Chicago in 1908. He said he then took up a study of "Old Thought," which, he said, was a combination of spiritualism and personal magnetism. Treatments, he said, were intended to get the "patient's mind in a passive condition" so that the patient would forget disease.

Dr. Bruce, in the holdover, showed a Post-Dispatch reporter his system. He rubbed his hands together, blew on them and placed one hand on the reporter's chest and the other on his back. He then asked if the reporter felt the electricity. The reporter was compelled to confess that he did not.

ANTI-LOCKER LAW IN TENNESSEE

State Against Liquor Is Making Nashville, Tenn., June 7.—Only the really cunning mind can find a way to obtain a drink in Tennessee now. Until last Monday midnight the prohibition law had been evaded by a great many club members and others by means of the locker arrangement. The law against that device went into effect last Monday and, so far as known, its observance is general, the public recognizing the fact that liquor must go or somebody with authority will be wanting to know why.

The prohibition law in its initial form did little more than enable liquor dealers to do a thriving business without paying other than Federal license, especially in some of the larger cities of the State, and cause many county and municipal officials to cross their fingers when talking about its enforcement.

SALOON LICENSE FRAUDS TAKEN UP BY GRAND JURY

Circuit Attorney Harvey Announces Gassolo Case Will Be Considered First.

The grand jury this afternoon began an investigation of the three saloon license cases in which the Post-Dispatch recently has pointed out grave irregularities, including forgery and the falsifying of public records. In each case, a license was issued by Excise Commissioner Rumsey, although his attention was called to the irregularities by persons protesting against the license.

In each case, also, the license petition was prepared by E. J. Hardy, professional getter-up of such petitions, who spends much of his time in the Excise Commissioner's office, and who is permitted to question and advise witnesses at hearings, although he is not a lawyer. Hardy testified yesterday, in the aldermanic inquiry into Assessor Schramm's office, that his petitions are never questioned, except in some cases where there is a protest.

Circuit Attorney Harvey said the first case taken up would be that of Louis Gassolo's license for a saloon at 4100 Delmar boulevard. Gassolo surrendered his license and closed his place last Saturday, after a plain showing of fraud in connection with his petition had been made in an official report of the Election Board.

The witnesses summoned for this afternoon were John H. Stansbury, George P. Vierheller and W. C. Jamison, clerks for the Election Board; Vincent O'Doherty, chief clerk for the Excise Commissioner; Gassolo and Frank B. Coleman, who was attorney for remonstrants.

Irwin Sale, who was attorney for protesters against E. J. Miller's saloon license, 103 South Jefferson avenue, and Wayne E. Wheeling, who conducted a protest against the issuance of a license to W. D. Herod, at Thirty-ninth street and McKee avenue, were also summoned. Later it is expected that other witnesses in the Miller and Herod cases will be summoned. The Circuit Attorney said he had found evidence which warranted him in placing all the cases before the grand jury.

MAYOR KIEL TAKES LEAD IN THE FIRST MUNICIPAL DANCE

Director of Public Welfare Tol-kacz Also Shows His Grace at Columbus Square.

GREAT CROWD PRESENT

Eighty Couples on the Floor
When the Regular Program Is Begun.

St. Louis' first municipal dance—a big open air affair held in Columbus Square, Tenth and Biddle streets—proved a success last night from the moment Mayor Kiel officially opened it at 7:30 p. m. by tripping before cheering hundreds of a modified one-step with his daughter, Edna.

Long before the appointed hour the crowd began to gather. When the Mayor took to the big portable floor, 30 feet wide and 45 feet long, a crowd of men, women and children were banded 10 feet deep on all sides, waiting for an opportunity to display their own terrific dancing ability.

"Ah, this is life," the Mayor said,
as he led his daughter off the floor.
Then Director of Public Welfare Tol-kacz and Mrs. Tolkacz, Horace Swope and Miss Charlotte Bumbold and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kiel danced the square. Park Commissioner Cunliff was on the side lines.

"Everybody come," somebody shouted, and there was a rush of couples to the floor when Gus Henschel's orchestra began the opening strains of the second number.

"Stars and Stripes" floated near.
In a moment there were 80 couples on the floor. Across the way, over the city street police station, the stars and stripes floated in the breeze, while on the floor Russ and Serb and Greek, Polack and Hun and Sicilian—all "United States Americans"—swayed to and fro to a lively tune.

The dancers were of all ages. Gray-haired men and women danced the old waltz to the "Blue Danube." Mothers and fathers left their children in baby carriages outside the inclosure and tried newer steps. Boys and girls—just beginning the 16-year age limit—joined in the latest modern dances.
There was no "costume de rigueur."
Upright worn was all right. They were in serge and work clothes and palm beaches—ginghams and, dummies and white lawn. And as the night was warm, many men dispensed with coats and collars, and held their hats in hands behind their partners' backs.

Only occasionally did some couple attempt the "bunny hug" or the "figgy bowl" and then a tap on the shoulder by Rodewy Abeken, director of athletics in the Park Department, or one of his assistants, put a stop to such.

All couldn't dance at one time, so those enforced "wall flowers" added interest to the evening by "rooting" for their favorites on the floor.
"Oh, you Red-go to it," man," or "Fatty, Fatty, you're the stuff," they called to various individuals dancing.
Certain girls—more graceful dancers than others—became the belle. As they circled through the massing to the floor for each dance with their partners, other admirers lined along the right-of-way and pleaded for later dances.

"Don't forget me, Olga," or "Say, Bettine, I can beat 'em all at that stuff; give me the next dance," they called out.

Approved by Civic League Head.
"This is a great thing for our people," Harry Rosenberg, president of the Patrick Henry School Civic League, said.
"Our girls can dance here under the eyes of their parents, and it may keep some who might be wayward from going elsewhere."

Park Commissioner Cunliff said the dances would be held Tuesday and Thursday nights in the various playgrounds. He thought the first one had been a great success.

BROTHERS EDIT PRISON PAPERS

TOPEKA, Kan., June 12.—Tom and Jerry Brophy, brothers, and editors of two state papers, are seeking greater liberty. Tom is in the penitentiary at Lansing, editor of the Penitentiary Herald, and Jerry is editor of the Reformatory Herald.
They were not newspaper men when sent to prison, but have taken up that profession since being incarcerated.
Tom writes under the nom de plume "Cuba" and Jerry, under the name "Jere" in his writings.
Both were sent up for burglary.
They claim they robbed a house because they were hungry. Both have applied for parole. They want to get out so they can attend a school for

WOMAN LEADS IN TAKING TOWN

LONDON, June 12.—The Daily News reports from the Guardia del Popolo an incident which occurred at the Milan occupation of a town in the Trentina.
A young woman, seeing the Italian soldiers under fire from Austrian, put herself at the head of the troops and avoided them until a hail of fire pointing to the officers the best route to follow to save the town.
For eight hours, until the place was taken, she remained with the troops, helping them by her knowledge of the place. She now wears as a decoration a laurel wreath and a more substantial reward is promised.

The Post-Dispatch Today Opens Its 11th Campaign to Save the Babies With Free Ice and Pure Milk All St. Louis Children Are Invited to Help

Because of Lagging Industrial Conditions Due to the European War, Need for This Work Among the Poor of the City Will Be Greater Than Ever Before, Say Those Who Administer the Fund.

SAVE THE BABIES!

Twenty Dollars will save the life of one baby
by giving it
pure modified milk.
EVERY DOLLAR HELPS.

The Post-Dispatch today inaugurates its eleventh summer campaign to save the babies of the tenement districts of St. Louis.

The campaign of 1914 enlisted the services of 2815 children, who constituted the Pure Milk and Free Ice League, of which the Post-Dispatch was an earnest ally, and this large and efficient army will, it is believed, find many recruits before the summer of 1915 has advanced far. Last year's army increased 88 over that of the preceding year.

The relief work to be promoted by the Pure Milk and Free Ice League will, as in former years, be carried on through the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission and the Free Ice and Sick Diet Circle of the King's Daughters.

In the 10 years of activity by the Post-Dispatch and the children of St. Louis there have been raised and expended $38,244.57. Last year the sum reached $46,157, exceeded in only two of the preceding nine years. The largest amount was in 1911, $4873, and in 1908 the total was $495.

Need to Exceed Previous Years.
Conditions in this year of the European war are such as to leave no doubt that the need this summer is going to be vastly greater than that of any former year since 1905, when the fund originally started. Hilbert relief has been required in the main only by the habitually poor, children whose fathers earn at best but enough to provide meager necessities of life, and those of widowed mothers who are unable to do even so well.

Uncertainty in the business world, with its curtailment of working forces and lowering of wages, has added largely to the number suffering deprivation to a greater or less extent.

For this reason the Post-Dispatch enters upon the campaign with a purpose to extend to the utmost its effort to ward the building up of a force to relieve this condition, and feels that it may with absolute confidence rely upon the children of St. Louis to co-operate

energetically and enthusiastically.

The summer season opens much like that of former years, so far as resources available to the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission and the Free Ice and Sick Diet Circle of the King's Daughters are concerned—there are virtually none. There was a modest balance remaining from the 1914 fund after meeting all obligations of the two benevolent institutions, but this was employed for relief during the winter months, as they are never idle when there is need.

The rather sudden change in temperature from early spring coolness to a midsummer warmth, operated suddenly in creating demand for ice and milk. They must be free to reach the tenements in appreciable quantity, and it is imperative that the heat-distressed children of the poor receive pure milk if they are to escape disease and death. These essentials can reach them only through benevolent channels, and these can be made most effective—if not solely effective—through the army of children constituting the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund.

"Demand is greater than ever before," Mrs. Joseph S. McIntyre, president of the Free Ice and Sick Diet Circle of the King's Daughters, told a Post-Dispatch reporter today, in discussing the question of free ice for babies in indigent families.

"We will avail ourselves of the free ice offered by the Polar Wave Co. as far as practicable," she continued, "but the main relief, I believe, must be expected through the children and the Post-Dispatch, working together to provide an adequate supply. Last year we were furnished ice by the Polar Wave at a reduced price, but that concession has this year been refused."

A similar situation was reported by Herbert E. Mortland, secretary of the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission.

ades, natives of Greece, were among the first to join the Municipal Improvement League. Several clergymen also enlisted as workers.

The members of the Citizens' Parkway Commission, who formed the Municipal Improvement League, will keep a record of the names of the voters, to be used when the Parkway proposition comes up again.

Last Year 2616 Boys and Girls Won Membership in Pure Milk and Free Ice League and $4491.57 Was Raised, a Fine Record, Truly, but One That Should Be Surpassed This Summer.

It is to be a mite toward "saving the babies." No one has ever had occasion to complain of undue aggressiveness in the appeals made by the children for this great charity, even were there a reason so indifferent to the needs to be annoyed by such an appeal.

"SAVE THE BABIES!"
The time for making that a live slogan has arrived; conditions warrant its use with more earnestness and enthusiasm than in any previous summer since it came into being, and the Post-Dispatch feels every confidence that its effect, accompanied by an activity and interest that arises whenever need for them is great, will be a notable record of achievement when the campaign shall close next October.

"Instead of an army of children less than 3000 strong there probably will be one of close to 5000. Instead of less than $5000 raised, the Post-Dispatch hopes to be able to report the raising and expenditure of nearly twice that amount.
It believes that conditions facing those who would "save the babies" will call for that amount of increase both in the number of workers and the sum total of their efforts, and that the demand will find ready and cheerful response in the hearts of the children of St. Louis.

Incidentally, the men and women of the city should not ignore the call upon them for co-operation. This they can extend through their children or the children of their neighbors.

DE SOTO BANK TO BE INVESTIGATED

Private Institution Suspended
When Otis M. Monroe,
Owner, Died April 9.

The affairs of the Jefferson County Bank of De Soto, Mo., which has been closed since April 9, will be investigated by the next grand jury in that county, which will meet in Hillsboro in September. Prosecuting Attorney Kleinschmidt today told a Post-Dispatch reporter, by long-distance telephone, that he had found sufficient facts to warrant a grand jury inquiry, but that he probably would not ask for a special grand jury.

The bank, a private institution, was closed on the day when its owner, Otis
M. Monroe, died, and it has not since been open. Monroe had been ill for more than a year, and during that time the bank's affairs had been in full charge of his son, Robert B. Monroe.

Deposits were $120,000.
According to Robert Monroe, the deposits at the time of closing were about $120,000. The banks total liabilities March 4 when the last statement was issued, were $180,463.38.

Depositors and business men are agreed in the opinion that they will receive, in the final settlement, much less than the full amount of their claims, and some are said to have offered to sell their claims for 50 cents on the dollar.
Robert Monroe, when asked as to the prospect, said the settlement of the bank's affairs would depend in part on the real estate market and other business conditions.

The elder Monroe died intestate, and Robert Monroe and J. L. Hornsby, the latter a St. Louis lawyer, were appointed administrators of his estate. An inventory, filed at Hillsboro a few days ago, gives the assets of the estate, exclusive of real estate, at $265,000. This estimate, however, is said to include a large quantity of worthless and doubtful mining stock, listed at par value.

IDLE GUIDES OF TYROL SEE BATTLES FROM FRONTIER

Tourists' Resorts Deserted, Swiss Observe Austro-Italian Fighting in Alpine Passes.

SANTA MARIA, Switzerland, via Geneva and Paris, June 12.—The guides of the Tyrol are idle this summer because with the war virtually no tourists are visiting the mountains. All the well known resorts are deserted and the men who make their living by guiding travelers over the passes and up mountains are without occupation.

The well known Stelvio Pass, the highest carriage road in Europe, whose greatest altitude is 9565 feet, is deserted.
The Stelvio guides are gathered at the Swiss side of the pass and from a point which overlooks the frontier lines of Italy, Austria and Switzerland, watch the progress of the mountain fighting between Italians and Austrians.

Spread out before these observers for a distance of six miles is a panorama of striking interest. One can make out the Italian batteries carefully placed. The well prepared Austrian positions also are to be seen in the opposite directions.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Bryan's Resignation.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

There is much adverse and unfriendly criticism concerning Mr. Bryan and his resignation. Instead of this manifest injustice we should felicitate him upon his courage and tenacious adherence to principle, his unswerving loyalty to peace and his devotion to the public interest. This we should do, no matter how we differ from him in opinions.

He believes it will jeopardize the peace and prosperity of the land to send a message to Germany that leaves no other alternative than acceptance or war; and he found himself utterly opposed in this view by the President and the press.

The only course open to Mr. Bryan, not to be forced to do a thing diametrically opposed to his judgment, was to resign and be free to talk directly to the public, which, if it will, is the final judge. Presidents and Kings are only the highest servants.

This is no time to let prejudices against the man warp our judgment; truth is no less than truth from any source.

His suggestions: "Arbitration," "separation of belligerents," "humanitarian transportation," and "American avoiding passage on belligerent ships" are very good and in keeping with the dignity of a great people. The people should speak its voice should be raised against war, and heard even if it be expressed in the terms promulgated by a man very unpopular in some circles of our population.

JULIUS G. FRITON.

Location Objected to.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I would like to know as a property owner why it is that the band concerts are always held on the south side and at the bear pit in the Fairground Park? I would like to know why it is they do not hold these band concerts on the north side of the park once in a while?

READER.

Use Artificial Bait.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have just finished reading a letter over the signature "Brookson" in your "Letters From the People" column in today's issue. In this letter Brookson takes issue with the fisherman that recommended the use of live young minnows as bait for catfish. I, like Brookson, am not a reader of Isaac Walton's works, but regardless of the teachings of Walton, has not a minnow the same right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness that a mouse has? Yet what fisherman, either professional or amateur, would stand back or hesitate even for a moment at baiting his hook with a live minnow when fishing for bass, crappie or other such game fish? Where is the difference? Is not a young fish or minnow a more useful creature than a young mouse, or an old one either for that matter?

In further connection I will say, it can readily be seen that a young mouse would die a quicker death on a hook than would a minnow; he would, therefore, suffer for a much shorter period than would the minnow.

Think it over, go fishing and use anything for bait that will bring you success and fill your trout basket, whether it be mice or minnows, worms or "craw-dads."

THERSU.

"Be a Watchful Voter."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorial of recent date in respect to delay in our courts, was very good and, I am sure, expressed the feelings of many on this subject.

I should also like to suggest that the taxpayers and voters get together and insist upon the enactment of a law limiting the lawyer's power in filing suits without merit, or just to get a place of money.

The next thing to be looked into and watched is the way the cases are decided, that is, watched to the very end. There is no reason why a competent lawyer cannot dispose of a case in short order if he is fair and impartial. Instead of asking for briefs so as to give him time to, in many cases, find out the political standing and influence of the contestants and lawyers, which may aid him when he runs again for office.

I would advise people who need the services of a lawyer not to expect one who has heretofore sued just for a fee, and also that the voters and tax payers vote against judges who are the cause of cases being dragged on in the courts. I am sure that anyone who has had experience with the courts will agree with me.

I would also suggest voters to watch the jurors and the verdicts they return. I think a good slogan for St. Louis would be, "Be a Watchful Voter." This would spread to other city and state departments and bring about a much needed reformation. I believe, make St. Louis flourish and prosper.

A WATCHFUL VOTER.

MR. WILSON'S NEW NOTE.

Some misapprehensions in this country on the part of those who have minimized the seriousness of the Lusitania horror are undoubtedly due to a confounding of the usages of war on land with the usages of war at sea. In its clearness and simplicity Mr. Wilson's note dissolves these misapprehensions.

One country may attack territories owned by another, obstruct passageway through them, perpetrate enormities, carry on ferocious devastation. Neutral countries, however, while sorrowing over the spectacle, may be unaffected in their rights. Their citizens accept the hazards of war by remaining in the ravaged territories.

But the great thoroughfare of the ocean is owned by no one country. It is dedicated to the purposes of all humanity. Great traffic laws which have the authenticity of recognition for hundreds of years, for whose upholding much blood has been shed in the past, control its use. Any violation of these traffic laws is the concern, not alone of one country immediately affected, but of all countries.

Mr. Wilson's note again directing attention to the deplorable consequences of German violation of the traffic laws, is based squarely on the res judicata of the sea. The rather frivolous issues of fact Von Jagow raised as to the arming of the Lusitania he dismisses as "irrelevant to the question of the legality of the methods used by the German naval authorities in sinking vessels."

What could be more pertinent than his assumption that, Germany having recognized its liability for the consequences of the violation of some ordinances of the traffic laws in the cases of the Cushing and Gullflight, it will recognize its liability for violation of other ordinances? This thesis is the "principle of freedom of all parts of the sea to neutral vessels." Points which are expressed with especial elevation of sentiment and force in the note are these:

"The Government of the United States is contending for something much greater than mere rights of property or privileges of commerce. It is contending for nothing less high and sacred than the rights of humanity, which every government honors itself in respecting and which no government is justified in resigning on behalf of those under its care and authority. Only her actual resistance to capture or refusal to stop when ordered to do so for the purpose of visit could have afforded the commander of the submarine any justification for so much as putting the lives of those on board the ship in jeopardy."

"The whole world is concerned in anything that may bring about even a partial accommodation of interests or in any way mitigate the terrors of the present distressing conflict."

"It (the United States Government) does not understand the Imperial German Government to question those rights. It understands it, also, to accept as established beyond question the principle that the lives of noncombatants cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unresisting merchantman, and to recognize the obligation to take sufficient precaution to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is in fact of belligerent nationality or is in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag."

What is there in the note partaking of the nature of that ultimatum Mr. Bryan led us to expect? He resigned, he said, because he stood for measures of persuasion, while Mr. Wilson stood for measures of force. What departure from the measures of persuasion can be detected in a plea founded on the "usually recognized understandings of international law and the ancient friendship of the German nation"? It is really a more "persuasive" state paper than the first Lusitania note Mr. Bryan signed.

Mr. Bryan is a lawyer by profession. He is supposed as a young man to have devoted himself to the practice of law for a few years before entering public life. How can he say that the filling of an able brief confined to the legal merits of the case at issue furnished excuse to counsel to abandon the cause he represents? Has he often found, in his experience as a lawyer, that appeals to reason and justice, calm and fair discussion of points of difference between parties in controversy, provoke personal encounters on the part of opposing clients?

In his second statement, made public simultaneously with Mr. Wilson's note, he asks the American people to pass judgment between him and Mr. Wilson. The people are prepared for judgment.

Mr. Wilson appears as a great executive, upholding with ways of peace and self-respecting firmness the traditions of Washington and Madison and Lincoln and Grant.

Mr. Bryan, professing a stand on conscience, appears in the undignified role of a statesman involved in the cruel descent of an anti-climax of his own fatuous creation and arrangement.

ROUTING POLITICS AS A PROFESSION.

It is an interesting probability that New York's new State constitution will contain these fiscal reforms:

1. Control of budget-making by a commission composed of the Governor and other State officials, leaving to the Legislature the right only to reduce appropriations proposed by the commission.
 2. Requirement that local improvement or "pork barrel" bills must get a three-fourths majority vote in both houses to pass.
 3. Giving cities control of their own finances without interference by the legislature.
- These reforms would save taxpayers a lot of money, but we fear they would virtually ruin politics as a profession for "practical men."

BOOSTERS OF 1915.

Parkway opponents denied that they were obstructing St. Louis' progress. The Parkway project, which represented the hopes of the best disinterested thought in St. Louis on promotion of city advance, having been defeated, what is the alternative plan of Parkway opponents? If they are not chronic obstructionists of every idea of progress and helpfulness, what do they propose to do to make St. Louis a better city?

Is there any idea which they would urge with the hopeful earnestness, the self-sacrifice, the cheerful optimism, the strength of conviction, the loyalty to St. Louis shown in behalf of the Parkway to its advocates?

The energy devoted to the campaign was not wasted. It was the best sort of practice exercise for future civic victories. It is well to form those who voted for the Parkway into a permanent civic organization. They are citizens worth while to a town.

AN EQUAL TAX KINDERGARTEN.

In saying that an inquiry into false tax returns would be made, Foreman B. F. Itner of the current grand jury only indicated that a strict duty imposed by law would be observed. In directing the jury's attention to the subject, Judge Fisher was only observing a judicial duty imposed on him by statute.

The inquiry should be more than perfunctory. It should be a substantial compliance with the spirit of the law. Getting a start on the task will be difficult, but Judge Divebliss has suggested a very practical method of approach.

Even a system under which property is assessed at 70 or 75 per cent of its value, to make allowance for market fluctuations and forced-sale sacrifices, would call for taxation assessments at least equal to the amount of a mortgage on the property. Loans are seldom made in amounts exceeding 75 or 80 per cent of the value of the real estate on which it is secured. Generally the percentage is less than that.

Judge Divebliss has cited several instances in which property is assessed for much less than the amount for which it is mortgaged. To apply the test of this standard to representative parcels of real estate in different portions of the city will reveal the extent to which real estate owners are dodging taxes.

Locating the tax dodger who defrauds the city of its just due on the personal property he owns is another problem, but there are ways of doing it. The inquisitorial powers of the grand jury are sufficient to ascertain facts. After that the exposure of the dodger is a matter of correlation and comparison.

This is an important work. It will supply revenue for improvements St. Louis needs. The cottage should not be taxed on a greater proportion of its value than the skyscraper.

Such an inquiry can be made a kindergarten for the instruction of the public on the inherent injustices as well as casual evasions of the present State tax system. It can give the people an idea of what equal taxation would mean. It ought to serve as a preliminary to instituting a scientific system of taxation, scientifically administered throughout the State.

ADVISING GRADUATES.

Everybody who possesses the slightest talent for advising, from Prof. Taft down, is engaged in the seasonal sport of advising graduates at commencement exercises. Without boasting special gifts in that line, we should like to say a few words to the graduating youth by way of diversion and relief from advising grown-ups.

"Learn to be honest early in life," urged an elderly lawyer to a graduating class in a Northern university, "for it has been my experience that if you do not acquire honesty in youth you never will." Our advice to the young is to be as much better than their elders as possible, which involves being different from them in a great many respects.

That the young are smarter than their elders, better informed and better equipped for "the struggle of life" we must concede, else we are forced to acknowledge that our system of education is all wrong and the march of civilization is backwards. It is in "experience" alone that mature generations claim superiority over the fledglings, and the inconstancy of this is apparent when we mature ones cite our experience as something for the young to avoid.

Respect for their elders in any event we would gently insist upon, but our principal advice to Youth is—be confident. There is nothing like the brilliancy of sheer youth for accomplishment when backed by the courage of undertaking and persistence.

KAISER-AMERICANS FOR BRYAN.

Kaiser-Americans, we observe, are strong for Private Citizen Bryan. Formerly these Kaiser-Americans belonged to the Republican party and for years they execrated and voted against the Mr. Bryan who used to run for the presidency on the Democratic ticket. Their present enthusiasm for their erstwhile pet aversion is not only amusing, but significant. It may be one of the early signs of the campaign of 1916. In any event, it is an eloquent commentary upon Mr. Bryan's resignation.

Just at present the campaign of 1916 seems a long way off, but there is a political lesson in the recent conduct of Mr. Bryan and its result in drawing the wrong kind of people to his side. He has disclosed dangers which other aspirants will do well to avoid. The support of Kaiser-Americans will prove an embarrassing handicap.

BROKEN-HEARTED HORSES.

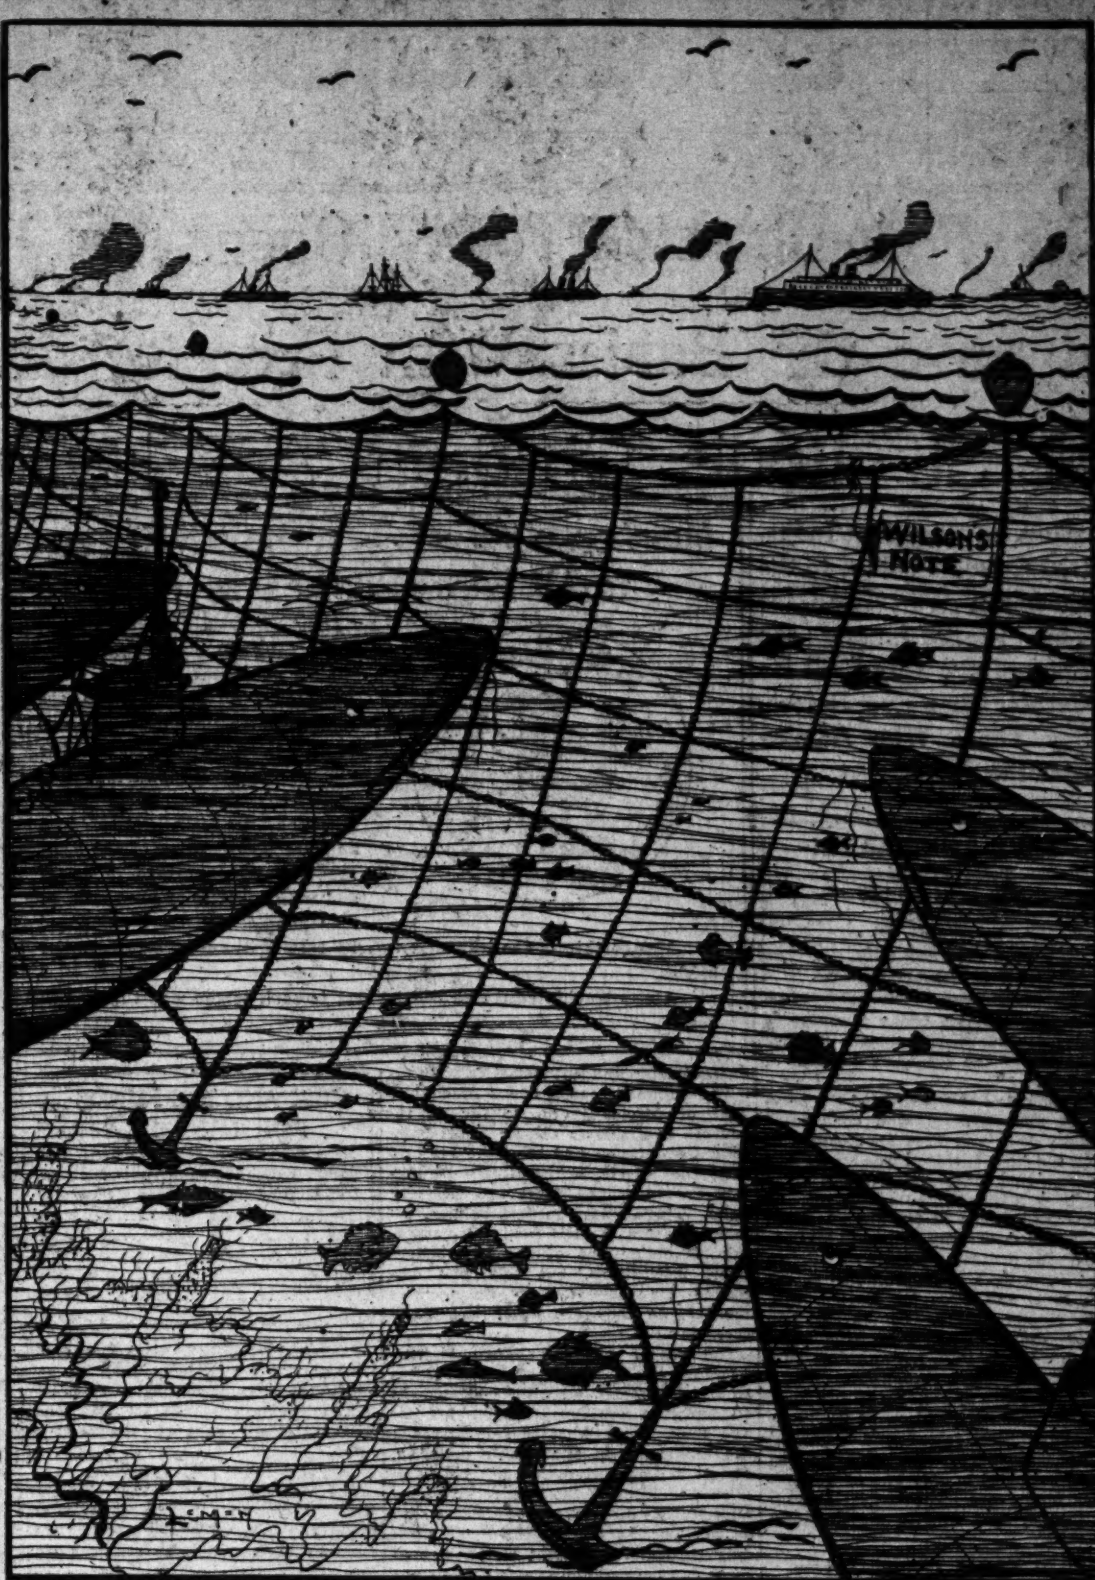

The director of the Blue Cross, which cares for the sick and wounded among the 800,000 horses used by the French and British armies in France, says many "die of a broken heart."

No wonder!

These are the equine aristocrats—carriage horses, hunters, runners and trotters, drawn like the pick of human kind, the bravest and the best, to fill the bloody maw of the great god War. In other days they would have borne brave officers gallantly across shoddy fields, or have carried heroic troopers in swift cavalry charges, or have raced from corps to corps with dispatch bearers, sharing with their masters the excitement and the glory of the fray.

Today they find war, so far as they are concerned, an inglorious trade. They break under the brutal drudgery of hauling heavy cannons and artillery wagons over rutted roads and muddy fields. Too proud to "quit," and let their drivers worry, as mules or draft horses will do when burdened with a load too heavy, they burn flesh and spirit mercilessly attempting the impossible; they fret,icken and die.

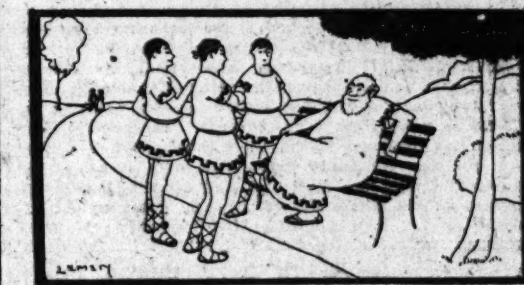

Imagine mighty Salvador, or good game Joe Patchen, or superb Maud S., or beautiful Jaye-See, or beaten but indomitable little away-backed Tanager, sent at the zenith of their track careers, to drag gross burdens endlessly through deep, sticky mire!

THE BARRIER.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH by Clark McAdams

SOCRATES ON BRYANUS.

GLAUCON: Well, Socrates, what do you think of it all?

Socrates: I am not surprised. I have known Bryanus for 20 years, and I have never known him to be for anything at a time when it was practicable. It is not that there isn't anything in what he wants, but that there isn't anything in it at the time he wants it.

Glaucon: A very shrewd analysis of Bryanus, I think.

Socrates: You will recall how many things he has been for, and how seldom any of those things has been practicable at the time.

Glaucon: Yes.

Socrates: You know there is on a gasoline engine what they call a timer.

Glaucon: Truly.

Socrates: Very well. The political philosophy of Bryanus lacks something of that kind. There is probably not a man in the Cabinet who does not believe that Bryanus' arbitration plan is a good thing, but they all doubt its practicability just at this time.

Glaucon: Exactly.

Socrates: That is characteristic of Bryanus. He has the unfortunate quality of only being right in advance.

Glaucon: So it seems.

Socrates: Singularly, too, Bryanus can never see that. He has what might be termed political farsightedness. He sees the ultimate, but he has no visual sense of the present.

Polemarchus: You are getting him down pretty fine now, I think.

Socrates: Yes. I am in rather good form this morning. Bryanus is, too, an unusually good subject for the purposes of what we might call bed-rock analysis.

Thrasymachus: It is very interesting. I have always hoped we might some day discuss Bryanus. I recall that in the war with Spain he went to the front. Has he changed since then?

Socrates: Not at all Thrasymachus. Once war is declared all differences of opinion end. That is the reason some countries declare war. It is before war is declared that these differences of opinion crop out. If we went to war with Germany in this instance Bryanus would be on the firing line quicker than you could say Scot!

Polemarchus: But do you think he was quite fair in doing what he has done, Socrates?

Socrates: Why not? In a grave matter like this our fortunes are absolutely in the keeping of the President and his Cabinet. Would it be quite fair to us if anyone in that circle were not sincere in doing what he did?

Thrasymachus: I don't think it would be. Socrates: Nor do I, Thrasymachus. It is much better, in my opinion, for a member of the Cabinet to say what he thinks now than it would be for him to say what he thought all the time after it was too late for that to do any good. I think we might blame Bryanus for being impracticable, but I cannot see how we can honestly blame him for being sincere.

Thrasymachus: That is what I tried to say yesterday, but I could not quite put it as you do, Socrates. Socrates: It is sweet of you to say that, Thrasymachus. Now let us all fall thinking again.

COLLEGE PROFESSORS AND CLUBS.

WE are afraid the late Mr. Barnard has been terribly misunderstood. In leaving a fund with which to pay the dues of college professors in some of our more expensive clubs he was not trying to help the professors, as some of them are disposed in resentment to think; he was trying to do something for the clubs. As a business man of great means and long familiarity with what men talk about in clubs of this sort, it is no doubt struck him that the plans of the conversation in such places might easily be raised by getting in a few college professors. It was a quite natural conclusion that where all those present suffered somewhat in conversation by the limited educational horizon of the stock and bond brokers or the wheat pit, an occasional college professor leading the conversation in front of a wood fire on a winter's night ought to be an excellent thing. We think the professors should do it, too. There is a mental slumming which is as much the duty of these people as it is the duty of all to smooch the poor.

IN THE DEY COUNTRY.

The first delegation of files came in from Little Rock last week. You could smell beer all over them. Salem (Ark.) Sun.

It would be interesting to know what moving picture money is worth on the dollar. John Bunney, who was probably the best paid of all the moving picture stars, left an estate of $80,000 in real money.

It is said that the life of a British officer on the firing line is about 10 days. A horse lasts 10 days, and an automobile thirty. A war cabinet lasts about three months.

Don't take the Parkway defeat too hard. It always takes one skirmish as a matter of that sort to locate the enemy.

Some notion of the opulence of baseball players at this time may be gained from the announcement that there was a diamond robbery in the Cardinal dressing room this week.

The profile of a workman is to appear on some of our new money. The average workman would much rather get his hands on it.

Mr. Bryan: I'll have to resign.

Mr. Wilson: All right. Pick out your book cover.

Mr. Bryan seems to have some hifalutin notions about the high seas.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

E. G.—If skin is dry and peels it is from lack of natural oil. Such skin should be massaged often with a good skin food or cold cream. The massage stimulates the oil glands to perform their natural work, while the cold cream supplies what natural oil is lacking. The face should always be carefully dried after washing it, as the water is drying to the face.

RESPECTFULLY.—Large veins in hands are sometimes caused by defective circulation or indigestion. Do exercises that will use the arms, such as throwing the hands from the shoulders out straight, and then out to front. Raise them as high above the head as you can and swing them as far back as you can reach. Be sure that the digestive organs are working as they should; eat only simple food.

CLEANSING.

PARKER.—Paint stains on window glass: After wetting the glass, lay a cent flat against it and rub.

DOY.—White enamel washwork, or light-painted wood, use half milk and half water, adding a teaspoon baking soda to one quart milk or water.

ANIN.—Lemons: Cornmeal first, then lemon juice. If lemon juice is used, rinse with warm water. When dry, iron with hot iron to stiffen. (No guaranty goes with this.)

G. H. E.—Ink on silk: Some readers report good results from rubbing spots with the sulphur end of a match, first wetting the stain. Certain makes of ink will vanish by wetting with turpentine and rubbing between the fingers.

LAW POINTS.

LOSER.—The statements you make are not clear enough for us to decide the answer. Why not see an attorney and talk over the case?

INTERESTED.—Lower interest could be mortgaged or sold, but you would not succeed in doing either unless your children signed with you.

D. E. W.—From appearance you have recourse against the company, but depending upon the construction of contract in other respects than that stated, if any.

S. J. W.—We do not believe a widow would succeed in mortgaging her dower interest in the farm. Who would make chance with death, which a mortgage must take? At her decease her dower is extinguished and the mortgage as well, leaving mortgage without any security on her note. Unless the children signed the mortgage they could not be held liable for anything their mother may do.

K. O.—If in the deed you received in the property it was stated you were to assume the incumbrance, you would be held liable for any deficiency upon foreclosure and sale of the property; that is, if not enough is realized to meet the principal and interest. In such case you would have recourse against the party to whom you sold and was to assume the indebtedness. Whether you could be held if holder of a mortgage bought at the sale for a price less than necessary to satisfy the debt, interest and costs, depends upon facts at the time. If you did not assume you are not liable.

F. B.—(1) As taxes for 1914 took effect June 1, 1914, you are liable for the personal assessment in that county in which you reside on that date. Can't say amount of costs, but it will not be much. (2) We do not think county will push collection by reason of garnishing your wages to collect the judgment in place you now reside. (3) You should make your return as of senior this fall for 1914 taxes; too late now for 1915, but don't worry about that now but see to make this fall as above said. Age hasn't anything to do with exemption from taxes; everyone having real and personal property is subject thereto.

THE "CROSS OF GOLD."

A. B. & X. Y. Z.—Mr. Bryan contended that the Democratic Party was for labor. He said in the Democratic nominating convention of 1896: "You shall not pass down upon the backs of labor this cross of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold." We find this statement; Mr. Bryan's famous "Cross of Gold" speech seemed to be an extraordinary effort, but as a matter of fact, it had been carefully prepared, written, rewritten, and polished by an, criticized by her, typewritten by her, and learned by heart by Mr. Bryan. It is a masterpiece of studied and calculated for effect, and while Mr. Bryan may not have foreseen the result, it is a masterpiece of effect would be there is no doubt as to the effect being great. Mr. Bryan has certainly been his most valuable helper.

MRS. M. R.—At various times statements have appeared suggesting that premiums would be given for large collections of cancelled United States postage stamps. Of late, however, no such offers have been made by credulous persons. Who would have thought it, in vain for a market.

RUSSELL.—Russia is building a submarine 60 feet long, 14 wide, said to be the largest of the world. The tests submarine have been under water 48 hours at a time. Some have a radius of action of 200 miles. They could cross the Atlantic without resupplying their fuel. One is planned for 400 miles. A submarine carries 20 to 30 men. United States navy has built a submarine. Total United States army strength, 22,179 (including organized militia and Philippine troops). This is a smaller force than that of any other considerable country.

Tozan's Blunder

Plotting the death by dynamite of his rival and the girl in the case, a jealous fiend is foiled by a law of gravitation.

By John Darrough.

STEPAN had never feared Tozan, not even after he won Sophie Katlok from him. Tozan had come to the mine two years before, a tramp, and Stepan, who pitted him, had given him a job. Afterward Tozan fell in love with Sophie, old Katlok's daughter, and Stepan won her away. Still, a girl has the right to change her mind, and Sophie's decision seemed to Stepan no reason why his protégé and friend should cast black looks at him.

Therefore when Tozan came to Stepan's bedside at night and told him old Katlok wanted him, in his house at the bottom of Long Shaft, half a mile deep of mine, Stepan accompanied Tozan without hesitation. The lead in Long Shaft had been cleaned out, the shaft had been abandoned, and old Katlok's house was to be dismantled. The old Bohemian, who had lived there with Sophie for half a year, emerging into the upper air only on Saturday nights, was glad of the change.

But the four of them—Katlok, Sophie and the two boarders, Stepan and Tozan—had lived in too close intimacy down in the mine. That was why Tozan lost his sense of proportion, why he had been brooding over Stepan's theft, as he termed it.

They Entered the Cage.

STEPAN accompanied Tozan without hesitation, but he stopped at the minehead and looked at him inquiringly.

"I thought Katlok had left the house," he said.

"No, he is there," replied Tozan, "with Sophie."

They entered the cage and descended. It was many minutes later when they emerged at the bottom of Long Shaft, beside Katlok's house. All round them radiated the galleries which had been flung forward from this center. Infinitely high above them was a tiny star—the great are light at the mine's head.

"He is in here," said Tozan, turning toward the house. Stepan turned, too, and immediately Tozan's loaded cane descended with calculated force upon the back of his head, flinging him to the ground, stunned.

When he opened his eyes, Stepan was lying upon the ground in front of Katlok's house, securely bound with ropes. His head ached and throbbed madly from the blow. Over him stood Tozan. He was watching him intently.

"Where is Sophie?" growled Stepan, writhing in his bonds.

Tozan laughed and pointed behind him. As Stepan turned his head a muffled, smothered cry reached his ears. He managed to twist far enough to see Sophie, a rag over her mouth, strapped to a chair against the shaft of the elevator.

"Now, Stepan, listen," said Tozan, smacking his lips. "You stole Sophie from me, and you are going to die, you know. At first I thought that I would spare you and kill the girl, because you got me my job. But that would be inconvenient, and so you are both going to die together."

"At the top of the mine shaft, right in the middle of the shaft, are a dozen sticks of dynamite, suspended from a cable, connected with a time fuse. In 15 minutes more the first explosion will come. Time fuse to the cord and sets through the cord. The dynamite falls half a mile, vertically. It falls on you, Stepan."

My Wife's Husband

A Domestic-Life Serial.

By Dale Drummond.

Chapter XL.

HAD been first surprised then gratified to see the friendly spirit which existed among the members of the staff of Lumley Hospital.

"It's a great comfort to have you with me, Miss Reese," I remarked one evening. "I can talk shop with you and you can talk of other things with me. Really, I scarcely know how I managed without you."

"As long as you talk shop I feel that I am, perhaps, helping to earn my salary, but I feel guilty when we talk of other things."

"Oh, I don't know! I sort of feel that your other friends should be the ones to entertain you."

"For a minute I thought she meant Jane, and I flushed guiltily, but then I knew she could not possibly understand how things were between us and so dismissed the thought. I felt for the moment uneasy. A spate of something not intended had entered into our comradeship. Something strange and infinitely quaint. But I did not know Miss Reese."

"I suggest Miss Reese," Mr. and Mrs. Hemming and Mr. and Mrs. Prentice were soon to go away for the summer, and Jane insisted we must give them a dinner before they left. I tried to object, but she would not listen, telling me it was only decent after the nice way the Prentices had treated me. So I reluctantly promised to keep the evening free.

At the last moment one of the guests disappointed Jane, and I suggested she ask Miss Reese to take her place. "No indeed!" Jane replied to my suggestion. "I do not care to flaunt the reason you have no time for me," she repeated. "We will do nicely as we are."

I was almost too astonished to speak, then.

"You're crazy, Jane," I said. "Or have you done me the honor of being jealous? I didn't suppose you cared enough."

"People can be jealous without caring in the way you mean. They can be jealous of their rights, their impress upon others, of many things. Of these things I am jealous."

COCONUT OIL MAKES A SPLENDID SHAMPOO

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain, mildified coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get maligned coconut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—ADV.

Mr. Fox Fools Old Mr. Bear

By Mrs. F. A. Walker.

ONE warm, bright day in March Mr. Bear woke up from his long winter's nap and took a stroll down the road. When he came in sight of Cedar Run he was surprised to see his old friend, Mr. Fox, building a store. Mr. Fox said he intended going into the market business, and Mr. Bear remarked that he would be glad to be a partner. So it was agreed that they would run the store together. Mr. Fox to furnish the chickens, garden truck and Mr. Bear to bring in the honey and fruit from the orchards, as he was a good climber.

Now, down across the pasture was the home of the widow Wolf, a lady who had considerable property in her own right. And as Mr. Bear and Mr. Fox were both bachelors, they had both been trying for some time to persuade the widow that they would each make a good second husband. But she found it so hard to decide between the two that she said she would settle the question by marrying the first one who could bring her a shiny new buggy with red wheels.

THOUGH Mr. Bear and Mr. Fox were both trying to get the widow, they got on all right in the store. And not quarrel about the money, as they had decided not to divide that but once in four months. But one day Mr. Fox happened to look in the money drawer, and not a penny was to be seen. And as he walked to the back door he saw Mr. Bear hiding a new shiny buggy with red wheels in the rear of the barn.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Mr. Fox. "So that explains it. Mr. Bear has stolen all the money, bought a buggy and thinks he will get the widow. Well, maybe I will get ahead of him yet." But he did not say a word to Mr. Bear of what he had seen. That afternoon he went to the woods and looked about till he found what he wanted—a big, hollow tree with a large hole down near the ground on the opposite side. Then he went back and began to polish up a set of harness.

Sandman story of how Bruin is outwitted in the contest for the hand of the Widow Wolf.

When Mr. Bear came in from supper he said: "Mr. Bear, our stock of honey is low. In the morning I will show you a fine bee tree I found in the woods and we can get plenty." So Mr. Bear agreed he would go the next day. And that night Mr. Fox hid the harness and the buggy with red wheels in the bushes near the hollow tree.

THE next morning they met at the tree and Mr. Fox said: "Mr. Bear, I am sure, if you will climb up to that hole you will find plenty of honey." But when he had climbed, Mr. Bear said there was not a drop of honey in sight.

When Mr. Bear came in from supper he said: "Mr. Bear, our stock of honey is low. In the morning I will show you a fine bee tree I found in the woods and we can get plenty." So Mr. Bear agreed he would go the next day. And that night Mr. Fox hid the harness and the buggy with red wheels in the bushes near the hollow tree.

THE next morning they met at the tree and Mr. Fox said: "Mr. Bear, I am sure, if you will climb up to that hole you will find plenty of honey." But when he had climbed, Mr. Bear said there was not a drop of honey in sight.

Betty Vincent's Advice to Lovers

The Sweet Voice.

THAT, however, that is hardly ever, a refined woman or girl a part of whose culture was not in her sweet, nicely modulated speaking voice. Riding or walking about I come in contact with so many girls careless of this one component of an otherwise pleasing personality.

Taking a Sunday stroll on King's highway, purposely I followed behind a small bevy of girls to hear them talk. What they talked about did not interest me. How they talked, did. Confidences were exchanged at top of voice, followed by peep sallys and laughter so boisterous it could have been heard 100 feet away.

The new girl may argue that this is the manner in which the new girl cares to conduct herself, or as one girl wrote in the club day: "I don't care to live old-fashioned-like like my 'granny' did when she was a girl."

Nobody wants her to, for it is true our grandmothers as girls did live rather prosaic, colorless sorts of lives; still there is no reason why a girl "enjoying new freedom" should abuse it. A lady is a lady, all arguments contrary notwithstanding, and using a man's term, if a girl conducts herself like a cad in public that is generally what she is at home.

I hardly believe any one girl deliberately desires to be a source of criticism to strangers only too quick to criticize. Why she does so is unanalyzable unless, as is to be suspected, the poor thing doesn't know any better.

If the fairies again were giving around gifts I would rather have modesty and tact than all the other gifts combined. Poor indeed is any of us lacking either of them.

In a word, girls, behave in public. Who you are can be discerned within a minute by those watching and who you never dream are taking an inventory.

The London Royal Astronomical Society has voted $9 to 3 to admit women as fellows on the same terms and qualifications as men.

Lack of fresh air weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, the liver becomes sluggish, fat accumulates and the action of many of the vital organs are hindered thereby. The heart action becomes weak, work is an effort and the beauty of the figure is destroyed.

Put out on by indoor life is unhealthy and if nature is not assisted in throwing it off by increasing the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, a serious case of obesity may result.

When you feel that you are getting too stout, take the matter in hand at once. Get from any drugstore a box of oil of cod liver, and take one or two each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself every few days and keep up the oil. Your figure will come down to normal. Oil of cod liver is absolutely pure, and it is designed to help the oxygen-carrying power of the blood.

Even a few days treatment should show a noticeable reduction in weight. There is nothing better.—ADV.

CAMPAIGN FOR BIG 1916 CONVENTIONS BEGUN BY B. M. L.

Each Republican and Democratic National Committeeman Asked for Support.

Telegrams were sent today by Edward H. Hadden, president of the Business Men's League, to the 48 members of the Democratic National Committee and the 48 members of the Republican National Committee, asking them to pledge their support to St. Louis as the place for holding next year's national conventions of the two great parties.

The committee at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Business Men's League at a meeting last night, the appointments were made by Hadden. He will take several days for the consideration of names for the committees. Men are to be selected who are leaders in the commercial and political life of the city.

Inasmuch as it will be several days before the committees will get to work it was thought best to have Hadden send telegrams without delay to the members of the national committees and he was authorized to do so.

The sentiment at the meeting of the executive committee was that St. Louis should make an aggressive but dignified campaign and leave nothing undone to get one or both of the conventions. Steps will be taken later to raise the necessary funds.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS URGED TO MAKE EXHIBIT AT STATE FAIR

Representatives of the Organisation and Sedalia Business Men Here to Confer With the B. M. L. Representatives of the Missouri State Fair and the Sedalia Commercial Club arrived in St. Louis this morning for a conference with members of the Business Men's League. They came to urge that St. Louis have a large exhibit at the fair, which will be held Sept. 25 to Oct. 2.

The management of the fair has designated Friday, Oct. 1, as St. Louis day. This will be the first time a day has been specially designated for St. Louis. Mr. V. Carroll, secretary of the Sedalia Commercial Club, said: "The fair is attended by near 300,000 persons and the advertising opportunities are unexcelled. An investigation shows that although Sedalia is in St. Louis trade territory, St. Louis merchants capture 74 per cent of its business, much of which goes to Chicago and Eastern cities. St. Louis shoe houses sell only 15 per cent of the shoes bought by Sedalia merchants, and St. Louis harness and saddlery houses sell only 5 per cent of the harness and saddlery. 10 per cent of the dry goods bought in Sedalia comes from St. Louis."

OWNERS TO APPEAL TO WILSON

American Importers, Who Have Paid for Merchandise, Hold Meeting of Protest.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Importers whose purchases of non-combustible goods from Germany and Austria are held up in neutral ports by the British order of Council, held a meeting in the Hotel Vanderbilt to devise relief measures. It was said the meeting represented $20,000,000 in merchandise thus detained by British embargo. The Americans are the only sufferers, as they have paid the exporters for the goods and cannot obtain delivery.

The cargoes consist of toys, novelties, notions, calenders, lace, embroidery, crockery, glassware, silk and leather goods, linens and a dry goods miscellany. The goods were intended for the fall and holiday trade last year.

The meeting prepared an appeal to President Wilson.

NEW WAY OF HANDLING MAN WHO DISTURBS WIFE'S PEACE

Police Judge Sanders today told reporters he had adopted a new system of dealing with the cases of men charged with disturbing the peace of their wives.

Heretofore, after fining the defendant, the judge has paroled him on condition that he report to the court weekly for a fixed period. Parole officers also called at the home and investigated as to the husband's treatment of his wife.

Judge Sanders says that, under the system, except in a flagrant case of wife beating, he will not levy a fine but will continue the case for 30 days. If the parole officers report that domestic conditions have improved in that time he will dismiss the case.

KROGER'S BETTER THAN A BANK

The most careful investors are satisfied with a return of 4% on their invested capital. But just think of a return of 15 to 20% with no investment whatever, and on the money you MUST SPEND for the necessities of life—that is what the Kroger Stores are doing every day for their hundreds of thousands of customers. Make the test any time you care to; measure the offerings, quality for quality, and you will always find Kroger prices 15 to 20% lower than anywhere else. Is it any wonder that it requires 60 stores to supply the demand for Kroger foods, and that even this number is growing inadequate, making it necessary to shortly open up more ECONOMY CENTERS.

McGraw Set a Trap for the Rabbit, but the Ozark Bear Put His Foot in It

TESREAU'S THIRD STRAIGHT FAILURE A HOLT TO GIANTS

McGraw's Pitching Staff Is Too Weak for Club to Hit Up a Pennant Stride.

FINANCIAL BLOW TO N. L.

Retrospection of New York Club Will Be Costly to Seven Other Clubs.

By W. J. O'Connor.

When Jeff Tesreau, the Ozark Bear, yesterday registered his third successive failure for the Giants, holding McGraw's men in their lowly and unkempt berth just above the Reds, Manager McGraw had genuine reason to worry.

Mathewson is on the shelf now and it is entirely a gamble when he will return. "Perritt is an in-and-outer, while Marquard alone has proved dependable, although the lube isn't one to bear up under adverse conditions. So McGraw's staff is pretty well shot, while the club in other departments is having a proportionate run of ill luck.

McGraw will be on the sick list for at least another week and with McLean suspended, the club must rely on two kid catchers—Smith and Wendell. Fletcher is laid up for a few days and there is a gap at short which must be filled by the Dardanelles. But it is the pitchers who are doing the most harm.

Hasn't Won Since May 29.

On May 29, Tesreau went nine frames against Brooklyn and won, 5-1, yielding six hits. In his next out, June 2, the Braves got to him for nine hits in seven innings and scored five runs. Schauer relieved Jeff and checked the run-getting until his mates tied the score 5-5, and darkness stopped the game.

On June 8 Tesreau attacked the Cubs. Rather, they attacked Jeff, forcing him to break ground in three innings under a fusillade of seven hits and five runs. Yesterday the Cards grabbed off seven runs and six hits in two innings, and Tesreau again lost it.

The one thing that will save the Giants now is good pitching, but where it is to come, no one knows. The failure of this team is surely to be disastrous for the league.

What Other Clubs Lose.

For years the big money in the National League has been extracted from New York. It is entirely a grand-stand crowd at the Polo Grounds, and a turnout of 5000 at that plant is worth about 100 per cent more to the visiting club than a similar house at any park in the circuit. And the crowds in New York always have been good. In 1911, when the Cards had their one big year, they got bundles of kale at the Polo Grounds. Since then they have neutralized the effect of poor patronage at Brooklyn and Philadelphia by the receipts in New York.

But if the Giants don't hurry, the Polo Grounds receipts will drop and bank accounts of the big league will be tapped. Nothing could be worse for the parent body at this time than the retrospection of McGraw's team. But the fact that the Cards play their damndest against New York, only again impresses the fact that the honesty of baseball is beyond cavil. It's the square game extant.

Becher Has Bad Finger.

That Bob Becher isn't in a hospital at this moment is explained only by the tremendous pugnacious bump of the speaker. Becher has a broken finger, swollen almost to the size of his wrist, which doctors say must be operated on as soon as possible. Submission to the knife is inevitable.

But Becher refuses to desert the Briton banner at this time, when the injury has already claimed Eugene, and he is in there daily, purely on his nerve. Cardinal players say Becher, in wearing a bat, frequently strains this falling digit and then sits on the bench in intense agony until the "thump" dies down. And somebody had the unmitigated gall recently to say that Becher wasn't trying. If they all were trying like Bob, the Cards probably would never lose.

Artie Butler made the prize play yesterday, when he got a bunt down to short left and finally guided the ball while running away from the diamond and into the teeth of the wind. He went back of second for another play, then he leaped for another man, stole home and scored. Butler's improved play, which he has shown since he was picked up, is a single. Indeed, Butler's improved play, which he has shown since he was picked up, is a single. Indeed, Butler's improved play, which he has shown since he was picked up, is a single.

PITCHERS' BATTLE IN SCHOOL LEAGUE FINAL LOOKED FOR Both Shaw and Benton Twirlers Made Great Records During Championship Series.

The Benton School nine, winner of the pennant in Group H, and Shaw, leader of Group C, meet tomorrow morning at the high school campus—formerly known as St. Louis U. Park—for the championship of the Public School Athletic Association and the Post-Dispatch trophy. The game starts at 9:30 o'clock.

Both these teams have made great records this year. Benton won its way into the finals by capturing five straight in its group, and then eliminating the Cardinals in the semi-final. Shaw made the same record and, on Wednesday, eliminated Garfield in a well-played game at Federal League Park, 4-3.

Two of the star twirlers in the primary school league are scheduled to clash tomorrow morning. They are Frank Devigila of Shaw and Willie Uhl of Benton. Uhl pitched three of the regular group games and made two wins in the semi-final clash from Clark, allowing the latter team six hits and four runs.

In the three contests, Uhl hurled against the outfits in Group H, and was found for 10 runs and 19 hits. He started by allowing Harney Heights six runs and eight hits. Then he came back with the regular group games and made two wins in the semi-final clash from Clark, allowing the latter team six hits and four runs.

LOWDERMILK TO OPPOSE GRIFFIN IN THIRD GAME

Rickey Relies on Grover Cleveland to Check Slide of Brownies Today.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Winning four straight games here woke up this sleepy old berg and the "fans" have once more rallied around the standard of the Nationals. Their stand against the White Sox and Tigers the coming week will probably tell the story of whether Griffith has a chance or not for the flag.

The Old Fox wanted to save Johnson for the White Sox Saturday, but the papers wouldn't stand for it, and he went in and won from the Browns, which counts for just as much. For this afternoon Griffith will start Bert Galla against the Browns, and if he weakens he will have to take the rescue. Griffith would like to start Engel, but he is afraid to take a chance against the lowly Browns.

Manager Rickey would like to grab at least one game here and last evening remarked that he would give Lowdermilk a chance to come through right. "If the big fellow gets going right," said he, "we can trim the Washingtons or any other club, for that matter."

The Browns were continually on their toes during the series here and were commended for always trying. Yesterday Rickey's peppy coaching brought a reprimand from Umpire Connolly, but the Browns' leader continued his rapid-fire advance to his players all afternoon. The fans seemed to like it, too.

All the ballplayers and "fans" around Washington are pulling for Bobby Wallace to make good as an indicator holder and if reports from Boston can be depended upon, he is sure to be a success. The former St. Louis player made a good impression right from the outset and is sure to be given every chance.

SPORTS SALAD

BY L. C. DAVIS.

The Heathen Weatherman.

W HICH, I wish to remark, And my language is plain, That for days that are dark And for oodles of rain, The weatherman's very peculiar, And the same I'll not try to explain.

One day you start out In a suit of mohair; And you ramble about With a nonchalant air, Till you suddenly find yourself freezing. 'S enough to make any man swear.

Next morning you freeze In a light overcoat While you cough and you wheeze With a cold in your throat. But at noon it is hotter than blazes, Which same would get anyone's goat.

To the office you go But forget your umbrella! And the first thing you know, It is raining like—well, I hardly know how to express it— But it shows that you never can tell.

Which, I wish to remark, And my language is plain, That for days that are dark And for oodles of rain, The weatherman's very peculiar, Which same I am free to maintain.

Miller Higgins says it is his lucky number. Johnny McGraw says it is a hoodoo. For what they do.

It all depends on the point of view.

"Pol" Perritt made some more faces at the bleacherites yesterday.

One thing about "Pol," he hasn't got the big head.

See by the spinal column where "Lumbago Bill" had a pretty good day.

"Chief" Wilcox went on a bat over the loss of his iron man. Four hits out of five times up is some guy.

The Cards are again standing 50-50 on the season. Come on, boys, let's go.

McGraw Please Note.

Those who are up on their Dickens will recall Mrs. Jarley's policy regarding giants when they have become old and superannuated. "Put 'em in the van," meaning keep 'em under cover, or they'd crab the show.

The Boston Braves have won half of their games. Quite an improvement over last year.

See where the Browns were Johnsonized yesterday. Were all the other National hurries on the crippled list, or does Griffith actually take the Browns seriously?

Well, anyway the Brownies made seven errors and that's more than any other club made. Gotta give it to 'em for what they do.

Minor Leagues Should Close Gates, Ban Johnson Believes Says Feds Shouldn't Have Opened

Condition of Several Organizations in the Country Such That the Game Would Be Helped if They Settled Obligations and Rested for a Season.

CHICAGO, June 11.—"It would be a good thing for baseball and for the club owners of several leagues which are in financial difficulties to square up to a certain date and close up shop for the rest of the season. It would save them money and would benefit the sport in the end by letting unfruitful fields lie fallow until next spring."

This was the startling statement made by President Ban Johnson of the American League as he prepared to leave for a visit to the East today. Mr. Johnson would not disclose the nature of his business but said he expected to be gone until next week.

Mr. Johnson's statement was made in the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, he continued, "in that the status of territory and franchises can be retained even if a club is disbanded, provided all obligations are met, up to the time of suspending operations. It would be necessary, of course, to notify Secretary Farrell of the club's intent and to show a clean slate."

According to Mr. Johnson, the Federal League ought to quit at once. He said:

"The Federal League ought never to have started the season. Its backers can save themselves a pot of money by quitting now and meeting whatever obligations they have assumed. Every day they continue business increases the cost to them."

"There is no thought of closing the gates of major league plants," he said. "Nothing could be gained by doing as all the clubs are under obligations which must be met whether they continue business or not."

"Baseball cannot exist healthfully unless it is self-supporting and I always have opposed the remedy of passing the bat among the business men of a city to take money to keep a team whose cost is greater than its business justifies."

Indications are plentiful, Mr. Johnson pointed out, that a considerable curtailment of the output of minor league ball will occur on or before July 1.

Following the disclosure of the Duquesne team's need of financial assistance comes the report that the Three-Base League is in a similar predicament. It is seriously discussing the cessation of operations by the middle of June.

Western League players already have been threatened with the alternative of accepting a cut in salaries or seeing the gates of their ball parks locked in the near future.

The players of the Elgin club of the Illinois League are threatening to quit unless their back salaries are paid. The Troy team of the New York State League was on its point of dissolution recently when a syndicate led by John Evers came to the rescue.

These are only the cases that have come to the surface. There are many others underneath. Mr. Johnson did not say how the matter will be handled, but he is generally understood that a majority vote of the players in each league will be taken to see if they will show a decided profit.

Miss Bjurstedt in Tennis Final for U. S. Honors

Norwegian Girl Will Oppose Mrs. Wightman as Result of Victory Today.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—Miss Molla Bjurstedt of Norway, and Mrs. George Wightman of Boston, will meet tomorrow in the final match for the women's national singles tennis championship of the United States.

That lineup was decided today when Miss Bjurstedt defeated Miss Martha Guthrie of Pittsburgh, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, in one semi-final match, while Mrs. Wightman was winning the other from Miss Eliza W. Fox of Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-4.

The electrical department wins. The field meet of the Bankers' Trade School, held yesterday, with a total of 464 points, was won by the electrical department. The winners were: 1st, Electrical; 2nd, Mechanical; 3rd, Civil; 4th, Chemical; 5th, Steam Engineers; 6th, Preparatory Department; 7th, Road was the individual star.

Mullen Surrenders Franchise.

DUBUQUE, Ia., June 11.—Owner Mullen yesterday surrendered the Dubuque Three-I team and franchise to President Farnham, who turned it over to a committee of local capitalists.

Alexander Is Ironman of Big Leagues; Wellman and Lowdermilk Close Up

Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Phillies, who is charged with three defeats in 13 trips to the hill, easily is winning the ironman honors in the major league. He has pitched in 129 innings, just 10 more than Carl Wellman of the Browns, who has faced the enemy's bats in 119 rounds.

Alexander's record is really remarkable. He has finished every game he started this season but one. He was taken out in the eighth inning of a game with the Giants, May 1, and the Phils lost 4-3. They got three runs off Alex.

His last defeat was at the hands of the lowly Reds May 3, when Gene Dale, the local boy, shaded him 6-2. On May 2, the Braves bumped Alex, 5-2. Manager Farnham isn't using Alexander for relief work at all. Alex starts the first game of each series and usually wins the last game.

WRAY'S COLUMN

One Way of Quelling a Gallery.

JOHN G. ANDERSON, the Eastern golfer who lost to Walter Travis in the final of the Metropolitan championship tournament, last week, believes that at least 200 policemen should be hired by the management of all big golf events.

This, Anderson says, could be done at a cost of $500, and the protection of the golfer would thereby be assured. John seems to think that the brutal and savage galleries that throng golf courses, torture players out of all semblance of form.

Reducing Danger to Minimum.

THE protection suggested seems adequate. For, in any tournament at St. Louis held in recent years, it would have provided about two coppers to handle each ferocious spectator, at least half of whom appear to have been women.

The golfophobic must be an unusually vicious type, in the mind of Mr. Anderson. For ordinary street-riot purposes it is estimated that 50 police officers could subdue a mass meeting of 500 persons—probably more. We therefore draw the conclusion that one golf fanatic can take care of two policemen, or about 10 average Americans.

East Is Not Hopeful.

R. NORRIS WILLIAMS, Watson M. Washburn, George Church and Dean Mathey, members of the Eastern and Pacific-Pacific tennis team, are vigorously prepping themselves for their trip to the coast in July, where they will oppose the pick of the California players. The task will be undertaken with the same hope of success that must have animated the Republic of San Marino, with a standing army of 500, which defeated the Austrian hosts, numbering several million.

Against the Eastern men named will be opposed Maurice McLoughlin, R. Landley Murray, Johnson, Potrell, Bundy, Griffin, Strachan and others. The Easterners appear outclassed both in singles and doubles, the mighty McLoughlin, if on his stride, being sure winner over his singles opponents. McLoughlin and Bundy, while not up to international championship form in the doubles, are good enough to defeat any American team.

Williams Ranks Second.

Philadelphia is kidding itself into the half-belief that Williams' defeat of McLoughlin was due to improvement. It might be remarked that the international series of 1914 showed better than anything where these two players got off, in comparative ability.

Not only did McLoughlin prove himself the world's champion then, but where Williams beat McLoughlin once, McLoughlin defeated Williams two or three times during the preliminary season.

California can make up a team of tennis players that can beat any in the world, at this time.

Lost by a Hair.

DARIO RESTA attributes his loss of the 500-mile auto race to the fact that the skid which sent his machine crashing into the concrete retaining wall began when he struck a rabbit which was scurrying across the track.

What Pitching Means.

DOPE which shows the hitting avert age of Ty Cobb against Walter Johnson will relieve the minds of some fans as to the value of pitching to a club.

Ty Cobb has a batting average of .400 or thereabouts, today. Against Walter Johnson, in the years that both have been in the A. L., Cobb has an average of .333. In other words, Cobb's attack has been cut down from major to bush league efficiency.

The first step toward winning is preventing the other fellow from doing it.

Why the "Sport of Kings?"

AMERICANS who recall the racing game for what it had come to be in this and other corners of the United States—a mere legalized method of transferring public capital from the salaried envelope to the "kicks" of touts, crooked horse owners, conniving book-makers and jockeys who rode with a ticket on some other horse in their boots—must have often wondered whence arose the expression, "the sport of kings," so misapplied in the case of the game, as it was 10 years ago.

The only thing royal about the old sport then was the trimming handed the man who thought he could beat it.

However, in England there was a time when it earned its title. Attention is called to this by the recent closing of all the tracks in Britain, even Epsom Downs, the scene of the big derby, with the exception of Newmarket.

Kings Kept Up the Game.

WELLS here's where the sport of kings had its beginning and its first organization. Tradition, strong under the ribbons of the British aristocracy, has decided the leaders of national policy to keep in action this famous course, over which royalty has raced its horses since the year 1519 and earlier.

Charles II, William III, Queen Anne, George I, George II, James II and others were among the earlier patrons of the sport. They raced horses over Newmarket course, and even rode them. Since then royalty has maintained an active interest in the sport.

When Royalty Wore Colors.

IN fact Charles II, the Merry Monarch, rode in races himself. Sir Robert Carr, acting secretary of State in 1675, wrote the following paragraph concerning such an instance:

"Yesterday His Majesty rode himself three heats and a course, and won the plate; all four were hard run and I do assure you the king won by good horsemanship. There was the mount to have a bet down on, lad! It would have been a hard mouthed horse that could beat a king's mount, in those days."

Doak Didn't Shut Out the Giants Because Huggins Wouldn't Let Him

AFTER Cozy Dolan, culprit of the day before, singled in the first inning with two out and started the Cards on a stampede that eventuated in the defeat of McGraw's men, 12-3 yesterday, the fans wondered why Huggins didn't take Bill Doak out after the third frame and rest him up for a more worthy foe. This question was put to Huggins today.

"Well, I'll tell you why," said the Cardinal manager. "My reason was and is this: Doak isn't the sort who would be able to come back again Sunday at his best. Bill takes a long time to warm up and once he's ready he might just as well go through the game. But besides that I didn't have anybody to pitch."

"I am trying to get my pitchers going so I can work them in turn. I expect Robinson and Thrift to be at their best in their next out. So I couldn't use three two. Sal and Nichols and Ferde had been in the day before and I didn't care to risk them again. So I reasoned it out that it would be better to let Doak stick than to disorganize what threatens to be a reorganization of my pitching staff."

There you are, Grand Stand Managers!

Huggins did insist, however, that Doak came up. After the fourth frame Lombardi didn't throw a spitball. He just leaped, and strange to say, the Giants couldn't do anything with him until the seventh, and then they didn't do much.

This appealed to Doak. "I just lobbed the ball over," said he after the game, "and those fellows couldn't do anything worth mentioning with it. However, I've been in games when I had everything in the world on the ball and they'd bang it to four corners. That's beyond my comprehension."

Connie Walsh, a wise head who has hidden his light under a minor league bushel for years, ventured the guess before yesterday's game that Cozy Dolan would break it up.

"Any time the fans ride a guy like they did Cozy yesterday," said Connie, "and the papers take pot shots at him besides, look out for his big doings."

And sure enough Old Cozy was the hero. Drove in the first pair of runs, scored another, made three singles, swiped two bases and played a tight game all day. You can't keep him down.

Bob Becher inserted a circuit swipe in the last wild pitch he fired, that wiped out forever the Giants' chance for victory. Bob was batting against a left-hander, and had played his string to 3-2. Schauer laid one over and Bob humped it past Snodgrass to the center field gate, scoring easily behind Snyder, Doak and Butler. He scored

Lack of Local Entries May Cause Triple A to Drop State Net Tourney

With only nine entries, all of them from Kansas City women, there is a chance that the women's state tennis championship tournament, scheduled to start on the Triple A courts tomorrow, will be called off.

Secretary Ross announced that unless the local women send in their entries today, St. Louis will lose the tourney. The entry list will remain open until 5 o'clock tomorrow morning.

If local women come in with their entries today, Ross will wire the Kansas City stars to come on for their first round matches Monday. The tournament will be staged in Kansas City, if not held here.
